INTRODUCTION

I

IN the large meaning which childhood always held for him, Francis Thompson remained a child all his life. His other childhood was spent in the north of England, where he was born at Preston on December 16, 1859. Here, and later near Manchester, his father practised as a doctor, lived in sound middle-class surroundings, and brought up a staunch Roman Catholic family. This religion Francis Thompson loved, but from most of the other things that give meaning to such an excellent way of living he soon found himself in exile.

He was sent to Ushaw College when he was eleven years old, to be trained as a Roman Catholic priest. He already showed an impenetrable reserve of character; otherwise he was as charming in person as he was hopelessly deficient in most of the qualities demanded by school discipline. Here he remained until he was eighteen, when the President of the college wrote to his father to the effect that he had reluctantly decided that the boy was unfit for the religious life. The letter, affectionate in tone, calls attention to Francis's "strong nervous timidity" and "natural indolence." From first to last the appointments which Francis made or which men made for him were to remain hopelessly out of reach. From Ushaw he was entered—rather than entered—for a medical training at Owens College, Manchester. For seven years this was to be the centre, the nominal centre, around which Thompson roamed in ever remoter periphery—lectures unattended, textbooks sold, examinations a painfully unnecessary formality. At this time Thompson's reserve became an isolation, his abandonment of the ordinary ways of life a compulsion, his unseeing wanderings through the streets of Manchester almost as trackless as the windings of his mind within himself. During these years, too, probably when he was about twenty, he was overtaken by indulgence in laudanum—explained or unexplained on the score of miserable health. Perhaps the dreams of opium, and the price it exacted in severing the poet still further from life, was not so much an initiation as a final decisive step—the sealing of the exile already existing spiritually within him. Since outer reasons for so extreme an exile are totally insufficient, it must have pursued him by some inner compulsion—one made scarcely any the less baffling by its later fruit in poetry. There is certainly nothing in the ordinary laws of cause and effect to explain why Thompson's early life took the course it did. These years were years of silence, silence of every kind, except for the angry scenes with his baffled and earnest father. He remained indomitably silent about what was to be his true vocation, perhaps not knowing, or not daring to know it himself. At last, in November 1885, following upon one of these scenes, though again without cause enough to bring about such a sequel in the nearly twenty-six-year-old son, Thompson fled his home, to wander in the streets of Manchester and then of London, asking of his parents only a few weekly shillings, totally insullicient to keep him.

Introduction

Now began the darkest period of the poet's exile, so dark that after a while the hopelessness into which laudanum plunged him made it impossible for him to fetch his few shillings, so lost was he in the certainty of their no longer being there. For two and a half years he was to endure a period of dazed wandering, of a mind glassily frozen with hunger and fatigue, alternating with rounds of hopeless tasks—holding horses' heads, trudging around as a bookseller's collector, working in a boot-shop, and even for a few days serving in the army as Private Thompson. He was still wrought upon by the phantasmagoria of opium, but also now by the first true writings, poems and prose, fruit of the spirit that one day called forth from this dazed wanderer in the streets—to the words “Is your soul saved?”—the reply, “What right have you to ask me that question?”*

The man who asked him the question was one of the benefactors of those nightmare days; another was the girl of the streets who found him home and shelter, only to vanish—balking his long-continued efforts of rediscovery—when it seemed to her that the arrival of another deliverer would make her own longer benefaction a disservice. How far the ministrations of these early benefactors helped to bring the first poems to light, or whether it was solely in the deep night of his loneliness that they were produced, cannot be known. It can only be said that since the greater benefactors of his life were needed to release the central flow of his poems, so perhaps these precursors played some necessary part in the production of these others.

It was in February 1887 that Thompson at last addressed his famous letter to the office of Merry England.†

Introduction

"DEAR SIR,

In enclosing the accompanying article for your inspection I must ask pardon for the soiled state of the manuscript. It is due, not to slovenliness, but to the strange places and circumstances under which it has been written. For me, no less than Parolles, the dirty nurse experience has something fouled. I enclose stamped envelope for a reply, since I do not desire the return of the manuscript, regarding your judgment of its worthlessness as quite final. I can hardly expect that where my prose fails my verse will succeed. Nevertheless, on the principle of "Yet will I try the last," I have added a few specimens of it, with the off-chance that one may be less poor than the rest. Apologizing very sincerely for any intrusion on your valuable time, I remain, yours with little hope,

FRANCIS THOMPSON.

Kindly address your rejection to the Charing Cross Post Office."

When the manuscript reached the editor's eyes, Thompson had been swallowed up once again in his own night, until at last, more than a year after it had been sent, the editor, Mr. Wilfrid Meynell, printed one of the poems in the hope that it would meet the author's eyes. It did so, possibly only by accident. At any rate, at last the waif "with no shirt beneath his coat and bare feet in broken shoes" * was drawn into the editor's office, and the great protection and friendships of his life began. The Meynell family—father, mother, children—for the remaining nineteen years of his life, were all to be Francis's protectors, friends, consolators, and inspiration.

The full tide of his poetry was not to be released for some while after his rescue began. When it came, what had brought it about was far more than such things as the sojourn in hospital which was arranged in an attempt to lessen the tyranny of opium. It is the contention of this Introduction that the Meynells brought about Thompson's poetry in a much deeper sense ; that in the truest way, for Francis to know them was the spiritual experience which brought forth his poetry, and formed much of its subject-matter. By the meaning they bestowed on his life they showed the poet in him to himself.

The wall between himself and existence was broken down ; however painful, difficult, and uncertain communication was always to remain, Francis found himself released at last into the world of men, with his own place to fill, and his gift brought to fruition. Slowly his poems began to appear, and in 1893, five years after his rescue, his first volume was published. With it Thompson found himself at once proclaimed a genius. But what the world began to shout noisily about was only what had already been brought to discovery within. It was not possible for the world's praise to turn Francis' head, for the source of his belief in his vocation now lay deeper than any place the public could touch. For now, since his rescue, he wrote, not to prove that he was a poet, but to celebrate it.

What a good deal of this praise was worth was shown when he published Sister Songs two years later. This, some of his finest poetry, was belaboured by a critical public whose vanity had somehow been offended by the very praise itself had formerly bestowed. Francis was now advised upon all his faults, but too late, for already his poetic faculty was deserting him, wellnigh for good. The New Poems of 1897 were to be the last he was to see published. Of this he was touchingly and decisively aware. " ' I shall never forget when he told me,' writes Mr. Wilfred Whitten, ' under the mirrored ceiling of the Vienna Cafe, that he would never write poetry again.' " *

The lamp had gone out, as he knew even when he was struggling with verses to lament it; yet at bottom, intensely sad though the fact was, he had always felt that such was the very nature of the poetic faculty; the poetic wind came and went as it listed, and the poet was the Æolian lyre to be emptied or filled by impulses not his own. Henceforth Thompson was in person the dimmed listless figure, struggling as ever in unmanageable arrears with the clock, drifting leaf-like along the streets, his clothes in hopeless disarray, his "fish-basket," containing books to review, strung round his neck. Yet he was still Thompson the prose writer, and was to remain so for a number of years, the generous appreciator, the delicate critic with the high-resounding style. The years went slowly past, his frailness growing gradually frailer, and he was passed from London lodgings to spells of country air, or for retreats in quiet monasteries, and so back again. He undertook and finished a life of St. Ignatius Loyola, but as his health became worse it brought with it more and more days impossible for work, and filled instead with giant fears, legacy no doubt of the opium.

Thompson was far gone in consumption for long, but even as he lay on his deathbed it was hardly found possible to lessen the dose of laudanum that was still a daily necessity. His death came quietly in a London hospital on November 13, 1907, at the age of forty-seven years.

So much for his life ; it must next be asked what it yields towards the interpretation of his work. It is of course true that it is in a man's life that the sources of his work lie—perhaps one should say, lie hidden. In recent years the critic has gained from the professional psychologist some valuable new tools for the closer examination of these difficult sources. And with them has come the easy temptation to use nothing but these tools, and to go on to judge a man's work entirely by his life : to insist that it is a man's life that speaks the last word about his art. Francis Thompson's life proclaims that the exact opposite may be a long way nearer to the truth : that it is a man's writings which say the last word about his life. For without the corpus of his poetry, his life is indeed like Hamlet without the Prince of Denmark. What proves the reality of his life is the reality the reader finds in his poetry. Thompson, in fact, like all great poets, acts as an interpreter between ourselves and the universe. And it is his poetry and not his life which instructs us as to what he found to interpret.

The great fact on which all Thompson's poetry is founded is, of course, that he saw the universe as a mystic. Now one of the essential qualities of a mystic is that he is simple in heart. It may well be objected that if this is so, why is the surface of Francis Thompson's poetry made up of a gorgeously coloured panoply of images on the one hand, together with a constant play of the subtlest metaphysical "conceits"—schooled from the seventeenth century he loved—on the other? Nevertheless, beneath all these dazzlements that simplicity is always to be found. For Thompson's mystical vision made him, of course, not important in his own eyes but unimportant: so far, however, many another man has reached without needing to be a mystic. Where the mystic in Thompson took him a long step farther is in the knowledge by which man is once more known as important—no longer because of what he is, but because he is. This illumination of Francis Thompson's, soaked through and through as it was with the sentiment of Catholic Christianity, took the form of an unshakable realization of man as being every moment in the infinitely great control of God. Because of this, he knew both sides of the paradox that man is at once of infinitely great and of infinitely little worth. This two-fold vision, as simple as the shape of a cross, makes up the great central feeling of his poetry. "The Hound of Heaven" is a dramatic statement of it. Once within this simple framework, just because he knew so well that its mystery was altogether past the exploring wit of man to outstate, Thompson never feared to urge his thought into the sharpest extreme of paradox and into the most daring simplicities of feeling; his apparent complexity is in fact the direct result of this underlying simplicity. Into all but his simplest poems this Christian paradox penetrates: without it a reader can hardly understand the ultimate emotions which are moving the poet, and which issue forth in his humility and in his urgency.

Introduction

Of Thompson's humility, much more will be said in a moment. As to his urgency, his vision necessarily gave to every happening an eternal import. His mystical urge doubled the urge of the poet in him, for it made the primary fact of his vocation as a poet into something far beyond his own control, and in which, even from moment to moment, he had only the humblest sort of say. For, not the poetry was his, but only the faults in it:

Yet I translate, ward of song's gate,
Perchance all ill this mystery.

Poems of Francis Thompson

And he did translate ill, just when he went against this knowledge, and attempted urgency of his own. Then he took on his characteristic fault of turgid rhetoric, filling long poems like "An Anthem of Earth" with poetry's raw materials only.

But there was another cause of this rhetoric, replacing inspiration by inflation, and that of course was—laudanum. Laudanum competed with the mystic in Thompson for precisely that same quality—the sense of urgency. Probably it was laudanum which first set floating those great cloud-shapes of imagery that fill some of the best, as well as most of the worst, of Thompson's work. Laudanum both robbed and enriched him. It is tempting to speculate whether in providing him with a craving for opium nature was not after all providing him with what she needed. For at his best the poet moulds all this swelling imagery the better to serve a strict discipline of thought. Always it is Thompson who was the poet, and not the laudanum in him; his poetry is like a forest plant which still puts forth its own leaves, though they may be dyed with rare strange colouring sucked from a tainted soil.

Perhaps without laudanum his poetry might have lost this rich pomp which makes it unique amongst mystical poetry. And perhaps, when mastered, laudanum lent longer wings to that urgency which distinguishes his emotions from the sweet or sad repose of the seventeenth-century mystics. For in Traherne and Vaughan and Herbert, what one thinks of first is a frugal depth of simplicity, poems of nature and of the cloistered study. Thompson's poetry, without any less sweetness, calls up papal robes and the hair-shirt beneath. Yet this outer gorgeousness is no empty vanity of vanities, but the celebration of the very same inner realities as theirs. He is alone among poets in showing humility to be so splendid.

Introduction

III

Thompson's humility was also distinguished from theirs in another way, but this way he shared in common with those other poets who clustered in the one beautiful group at the turn of the century—Thompson, Patmore, Alice Meynell, and Gerard Manley Hopkins. This was their special Catholic spirit of humility, which in each alike sprang up like a fine flower of chivalry.

Of this chivalrous humility Francis Thompson was the very Troubadour. Like the Troubadour, he brings his subtlest felicities of thought and his swiftest intuition in search of it. All Troubadours are humble for the sake of love, but Thompson's love becomes a special phase of his humility. In it he embodies that central paradox: for his lady is always the soul in its perfection, himself the soul in its worthlessness. His love poems to Mrs. Meynell are a sweet contest in which praise of his lady and dispraise of himself seek to outdo one another. Unlike the Troubadour's humility, Francis's never protests too much, for the humility of his love is an end and not a means. "Love in Dian's Lap" is the finest poetry of chaste love in the language. But it would be a great mistake to suppose its humility not to be founded on passionate insight, or Mrs. Meynell's place in it to be no more than that of a lay figure around which Thompson draped a set of merely private and disassociated aspirations, as poetically fictitious as the Phylisses, Celias, and Lucastas of the anthologies. The poems prove the contrary, for their exquisite and breath-taking praise paints a portrait matchlessly close to the unconscious portrait of herself made in Mrs. Meynell's own poems. In each the same source is clearly perceived. Only a true humility could achieve such superb and positive precision of praise.

The Thompson of his best poetry was always to himself the sinner and the exile. He made of

Introduction

"The Hound of Heaven" not a poem of a man searching for his own self, but that of a man who had thought in vain to escape it. The pursuing Hound—like the bestowing love of "Dian's Lap," like his poetry itself—came upon him, as he shows in Sister Songs, like a visitation; each of these different kinds of visitation was a mystery, a gift, and a costly burden. For each gift in its very preciousness left the sinner in himself in exile, and each perfection that he knew cast afresh upon him the burden of his own worthlessness. Here his life translated the metaphysics of his poetry into a plain tale of facts. He accepted the frailty of his daily life as his crucifixion to be paid for the splendours of vision he was released into, and sometimes he bitterly mourned it. To Thompson all men were exiles from heaven; but the price he paid each day for his mysticism was to know himself in exile. And to know it was a double exile, for it made him a stranger to all who could be content to take this world for their home. As a man he humbly suffered exile from heaven, as a poet he suffered exile from men.

A love-banning love, did the god but know it
Which barks the man about with the poet,
And muffles his heart of mortality.

Poems of Francis Thompson

For children he had a dozen different tendernesses, but chief among them was that they reminded him of the less unhappy of these two exiles. It was always one of his favourite images that man is at best a wilful child ; between his love and himself he kept worth and worthlessness clearly divided ; but his love of children gave him feelings more strangely mixed. For their wilfulness was so lovely that by its side there showed up all the dust—the “withered years”—of his own stronger wilfulness. And yet their loveliness was so great to him that it brought the hope that in the eye of God his own wilfulness might seem as innocent and past unforgiving as theirs. This is what lends the poems on children their muted poignancy, their wistfulness so charged with an import far beyond childhood. They were at once a refuge and a reminder, an assurance and a reproach. And as the most wilful child of all, what other place in heaven than a child's should be his ?

For if in Eden as on earth are we,
I sure shall keep a younger company. . . .
Look for me in the nurseries of heaven.

Introduction

IV

No vision is more simple than that of the mystic. It is so simple that some think it avoids altogether the difficulties of the objective world, its mystery no greater than the fantasies of a wish-world. But that is not true ; nor is it true even to place the source of the mystic's insight in some quite different world to the mortal one. The true mystic, like Traherne, is concerned with the very simplest objects. The difference between ourselves and the mystic is simply that the mystic is not blinded by the outer nature of a thing. He sees the same thing as ourselves, but sees its hidden essence. That is why it is dangerous to confuse mysticism with idealism. Idealism—occupying a no-man's land half-way between egotism and mysticism—paints a picture, blind as to whether the source of its vision is in itself or in reality, and quite unable to distinguish between the two.

When Francis Thompson found himself taken into the household of Wilfrid and Alice Meynell, with their children as friends and counsellors, it would be a gross misrepresentation to say that in his poems his gratitude idealized them, just as it would be a grievous deduction of " Love in

Dian's Lap " to say that though Thompson may have loved Alice Meynell, he did not see the real woman, but only his own barren ideal. There is a striking sentence somewhere in Patmore's prose to the effect that whilst a lover's disappointed familiarity never doubts it has come at last to see the loved one as she is, really it is the eye and not the image that is dulled ; the first flaming vision indeed saw the real woman. Because he can see continually what the lover sees only for a flash, the mystic is in love with half the world, for he sees everywhere the perfection which is hidden from others. The mystic in Thompson saw such a perfection in the Meynells ; and the man in him was overcome that such perfection stooped to minister to him. The God who had pursued now miraculously turned to succour him instead ; the hound became a milk-white fawn. To judge Thompson's poems realistically, to think them merely exaggerated, is, it must be repeated, to mistake their source altogether. To say that Thompson believed that God had sent the Meynells to him is to turn into a dusty pious conventionality what was the shining central experience of his life. And with the mystic's vision there went as well a radiantly happy recognition of all that was human, and humanly lovable, in the Meynells. The mystical for a time became no longer purchased at the price of the everyday world ; his exile was ended ; the two flowered together. That is the poetic experience given to us by Sister Songs, and all its hyperbole is a sort of exquisitely lucid stammering of the poet's gratitude. Its greatest hyperbole could, he was confident, only underguess the mystery. In "Love in Dian's Lap" that first extreme of wonder has changed, though its ecstacy is every whit as true, into a greater soberness, a wonder stilled by its very continuity. These highest and most perfect of his poems are already Thompson's own reply, the real gift his life could make in exchange for their gifts to him, and which he dedicated to them so touchingly :

Introduction

To you, O dear givers !
I give your own giving.

Yet the fruit of "Love in Dian's Lap" is the seed of Thompson's later poetry, and the first recognition that his continued acceptance of this gift brought upon him a further price than the one he had been so happy in paying with these poems ; it called for the growth of himself to an even higher moral and poetic level. His later poetry is the record of his struggle towards this height. Sister Songs is a poem addressed to children, for therein is the Francis who is still very much the lost child. In "Love in Dian's Lap" the child and the man in Thompson meet reconciled in the wonder of their praise.

Poems of Francis Thompson

For this was even that Lady, and none other,
The man in me calls "Love," the child calls
"Mother."

Thereafter he must go on to be "the man at feud with the perduring child," and Francis, for the few years that remained until his poetic gift died out in him wellnigh altogether, never quite succeeded in resolving that conflict; "Sight and Insight" is the record of it.

In love God had sought Thompson; in love Thompson in turn had himself to seek Christ—the Christ the Way of sacrifice. The love which he had worshipped in the delight which it had brought to his stricken self must be worshipped still, but its reward foregone.

Beyond your star, still, still the stars are bright;
Beyond your highness, still I follow height;
Sole I go forth, yet still to my sad view,
Beyond your trueness, Lady, Truth stands true . . .
"On him the unpetitioned heavens descend,
Who heaven on earth proposes not for end;

Introduction

The perilous and celestial excess
Taking with peace, lacking with thankfulness.
Bliss in extreme befits thee not, until
Thou'rt not extreme in bliss ; be equal still :
Sweets to be granted think thyself unmeet
Till thou have learned to hold sweet not too sweet."

It is the theme to which came also Patmore and Alice Meynell. Probably Thompson was gifted with a greater power of mystical vision than either of these ; there is nothing in their works to equal in its way the ecstasy of Sister Songs. But they were nourished on experiences to which his poetry did not fully reach ; had it done so it might well have surpassed theirs. The subtle music of Patmore's "To the Unknown Eros" and of Alice Meynell's poetic reticences—the music, as it were, of silence—announce a triumph of a maturer sort than any of Thompson's, more poetically rich though his were in his own sphere. Theirs was the victory of renunciation ; "Sight and Insight" is the poetry, the lesser poetry, of its cost ; full of images of height ; of price ; of search ; of loss ; or crucifixion, not resurrection. In the "Mistress of Vision," that strange shifting poem with its changing glances and fresh uneasy starts, Thompson gives us his clearest glimpse of the state he knew he was struggling towards. But his best poems remain those of the child, the youngling mystic. Where the other two speak in harmony, his poems, like Hopkins's, tell of discord. Hopkins's best poems are those strenuous wonderful ones of sense-delight; of all the four poets, his success had to lie in the nearest, the easiest, the external world; and to remember that is to understand the complementary sense of bitter failure which fills his religious poems. Perhaps it is a key to criticism that has not yet been unlocked that it was to Patmore that all the other three looked up as their master, and "captain of song."

"Sight and Insight," therefore, though it plumbs further than the earlier poems, is not their equal in poetic achievement. Why it was that Thompson was unable to reach the full height of the subject of his later poems is something the poems necessarily cannot answer; they are evidence only for the fact that they did not reach it. As to whether the man went beyond the poet and resolved the conflict only our temerity can speak, for to grope in this way without the light of his poetry, especially in the burnt-out shell of the later man, is to do so at our peril. What his poetry tells are our privileged confidences, and like all the confidences of poetry, of whatever they do speak they speak (sometimes perhaps in the poet's despite) infallibly.

Introduction

But even judging the poet by the legitimate judgment of his poetry, we judge by his voice and not by his silence. So long as we do not know what lay in the silences, any attempt to judge the man who survived the poet is an irrelevance.

PAUL BEARD.

THE HOUND OF HEAVEN

I FLED Him, down the nights and down the days ;
I fled Him, down the arches of the years ;
I fled Him, down the labyrinthine ways
Of my own mind ; and in the mist of tears
I hid from Him, and under running laughter.
Up vistaed hopes I sped ;
And shot, precipitated,
Adown Titanic glooms of chasmèd fears,
From those strong Feet that followed, followed after.
But with unhurrying chase,
And unperturbèd pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
They beat—and a Voice beat
More instant than the Feet—
“ All things betray thee, who betrayest Me.”

I pleaded, outlaw-wise,
By many a hearted casement, curtained red,
Trellised with intertwining charities ;
(For, though I knew His love Who followèd,
Yet was I sore adread

Poems of Francis Thompson

Lest, having Him, I must have naught beside.)
But, if one little casement parted wide,
    The gust of His approach would clash it to :
    Fear wist not to evade, as Love wist to pursue.
Across the margin of the world I fled,
    And troubled the gold gateways of the stars,
    Smiting for shelter on their clangèd bars ;
        Fretted to dulcet jars
And silvern chatter the pale ports o' the moon.
I said to Dawn : Be sudden—to Eve : Be soon ;
    With thy young skiey blossoms heap me over
        From this tremendous Lover—
Float thy vague veil about me, lest He see !
    I tempted all His servitors, but to find
My own betrayal in their constancy,
In faith to Him their fickleness to me,
    Their traitorous trueness, and their loyal deceit.
To all swift things for swiftness did I sue ;
    Clung to the whistling mane of every wind.
    But whether they swept, smoothly fleet,
    The long savannahs of the blue ;
        Or whether, Thunder-driven,
    They clangèd his chariot 'thwart a heaven,
Plashy with flying lightnings round the spurn o'
    their feet :—
Fear wist not to evade as Love wist to pursue.
    Still with unhurrying chase,
    And unperturbèd pace,

The Hound of Heaven

Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
Came on the following Feet,
And a Voice above their beat—“ Naught shelters thee, who wilt not shelter Me.”

I sought no more that after which I strayed,
In face of man or maid ;
But still within the little children's eyes
Seems something, something that replies,
They at least are for me, surely for me !
I turned me to them very wistfully ;
But just as their young eyes grew sudden fair
With dawning answers there,
Their angel plucked them from me by the hair.
“ Come then, ye other children, Nature's—share
With me ” (said I) “ your delicate fellowship ;
Let me greet you lip to lip,
Let me twine with you caresses,
Wantoning
With our Lady-Mother's vagrant tresses,
Banqueting
With her in her wind-walled palace,
Underneath her azured daïs,
Quaffing, as your taintless way is,
From a chalice
Lucent-weeping out of the dayspring.”
So it was done :

Poems of Francis Thompson

I in their delicate fellowship was one—
Drew the bolt of Nature's secrecies.
I knew all the swift importings
On the wilful face of skies ;
I knew how the clouds arise
Spumed of the wild sea-snortings ;
All that's born or dies
Rose and drooped with ; made them shapers
Of mine own moods, or wailful or divine ;
With them joyed and was bereaven.
I was heavy with the even,
When she lit her glimmering tapers
Round the day's dead sanctities.
I laughed in the morning's eyes.
I triumphed and I saddened with all weather,
Heaven and I wept together,
And its sweet tears were salt with mortal mine ;
Against the red throb of its sunset-heart
I laid my own to beat,
And share commingling heat ;
But not by that, by that, was eased my human smart.
In vain my tears were wet on Heaven's grey cheek.
For ah ! we know not what each other says,
These things and I ; in sound I speak—
Their sound is but their stir, they speak by silences.
Nature, poor stepdame, cannot slake my drouth ;
Let her, if she would owe me,

The Hound of Heaven

Drop yon blue bosom-veil of sky, and show me
The breasts o' her tenderness :
Never did any milk of hers once bless
My thirsting mouth.
Nigh and nigh draws the chase,
With unperturbed pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy ;
And past those noised Feet
A Voice comes yet more fleet—“ Lo ! naught contents thee, who content'st not Me.”

Naked I wait Thy love's uplifted stroke !
My harness piece by piece Thou hast hewn from me,
And smitten me to my knee ;
I am defenceless utterly.
I slept, methinks, and woke,
And, slowly gazing, find me stripped in sleep.
In the rash lustihead of my young powers,
I shook the pillaring hours
And pulled my life upon me ; grimed with smears,
I stand amid the dust o' the mounded years—
My mangled youth lies dead beneath the heap.
My days have crackled and gone up in smoke,
Have puffed and burst as sun-starts on a stream.
Yea, faileth now even dream

Poems of Francis Thompson

The dreamer, and the lute the lutanist ;
Even the linked fantasies, in whose blossomy twist
I swung the earth a trinket at my wrist,
Are yielding ; cords of all too weak account
For earth with heavy griefs so overplussed.

Ah ! is Thy love indeed

A weed, albeit an amaranthine weed,
Suffering no flowers except its own to mount ?

Ah ! must—

Designer infinite !—

Ah ! must Thou char the wood ere Thou canst limn with it ?

My freshness spent its wavering shower i' the dust ;
And now my heart is as a broken fount,
Wherein tear-drippings stagnate, spilt down ever
From the dank thoughts that shiver
Upon the sighful branches of my mind.

Such is ; what is to be ?

The pulp so bitter, how shall taste the rind ?
I dimly guess what Time in mists confounds ;
Yet ever and anon a trumpet sounds
From the hid battlements of Eternity ;
Those shaken mists a space unsettle, then
Round the half-glimpsed turrets slowly wash again.

But nor ere him who summoneth

I first have seen, enwound

With glooming robes purpureal, cypress-crowned ;
His name I know, and what his trumpet saith.

The Hound of Heaven

Whether man's heart or life it be which yields
Thee harvest, must Thy harvest-fields
Be dunged with rotten death ?

Now of that long pursuit
Comes on at hand the bruit ;
That Voice is round me like a bursting sea :
" And is thy earth so marred,
Shattered in shard on shard ?
Lo, all things fly thee, for thou fliest Me !
" Strange, piteous, futile thing !
Wherefore should any set thee love apart ?
Seeing none but I makes much of naught " (He said),
" And human love needs human meriting :
How hast thou merited—
Of all man's clotted clay the dingiest clot ?
Alack, thou knowest not
How little worthy of any love thou art !
Whom wilt thou find to love ignoble thee,
Save Me, save only Me ?
All which I took from thee I did but take,
Not for thy harms,
But just that thou might'st seek it in My arms.
All which thy child's mistake
Fancies as lost, I have stored for thee at home :
Rise, clasp My hand, and come ! "

Poems of Francis Thompson

Halts by me that footfall :
Is my gloom, after all,
Shade of His hand, outstretched caressingly ?
" Ah, fondest, blindest, weakest,
I am He Whom thou seekest !
Thou dravest love from thee, who dravest
Me."

POEMS ON CHILDREN

DAISY

WHERE the thistle lifts a purple crown
Six foot out of the turf,
And the harebell shakes on the windy hill—
O the breath of the distant surf !—

The hills look over on the South,
And southward dreams the sea ;
And with the sea-breeze hand in hand
Came innocence and she.

Where 'mid the gorse the raspberry
Red for the gatherer springs,
Two children did we stray and talk
Wise, idle, childish things.

She listened with big-lipped surprise,
Breast-deep mid flower and spine :
Her skin was like a grape whose veins
Run snow instead of wine.

Poems of Francis Thompson

She knew not those sweet words she spake,
Nor knew her own sweet way ;
But there's never a bird, so sweet a song
Thronged in whose throat that day.

Oh, there were flowers in Storrington
On the turf and on the spray ;
But the sweetest flower on Sussex hills
Was the Daisy-flower that day !

Her beauty smoothed earth's furrowed face.
She gave me tokens three :—
A look, a word of her winsome mouth,
And a wild raspberry.

A berry red, a guileless look,
A still word,—strings of sand !
And yet they made my wild, wild heart
Fly down to her little hand.

For standing artless as the air,
And candid as the skies,
She took the berries with her hand,
And the love with her sweet eyes.

The fairest things have fleetest end,
Their scent survives their close :
But the rose's scent is bitterness
To him that loved the rose.

Poems on Children

She looked a little wistfully,
Then went her sunshine way :—
The sea's eye had a mist on it,
And the leaves fell from the day.

She went her unremembering way,
She went and left in me
The pang of all the partings gone,
And partings yet to be.

She left me marvelling why my soul
Was sad that she was glad ;
At all the sadness in the sweet,
The sweetness in the sad.

Still, still I seemed to see her, still Look up with soft replies,
And take the berries with her hand,
And the love with her lovely eyes.

Nothing begins, and nothing ends,
That is not paid with moan ;
For we are born in other's pain,
And perish in our own.

THE POPPY

TO MONICA

SUMMER set lip to earth's bosom bare,
And left the flushed print in a poppy there :
Like a yawn of fire from the grass it came,
And the fanning wind puffed it to flapping flame.

With burnt mouth, red like a lion's, it drank
The blood of the sun as he slaughtered sank,
And dipped its cup in the purpurate shine
When the Eastern conduits ran with wine.

Till it grew lethargied with fierce bliss,
And hot as a swinked gipsy is,
And drowsed in sleepy savageries,
With mouth wide a-pout for a sultry kiss.

A child and man paced side by side,
Treading the skirts of eventide ;
But between the clasp of his hand and hers
Lay, felt not, twenty withered years.

She turned, with the rout of her dusk South hair,
And saw the sleeping gipsy there ;
And snatched and snapped it in swift child's whim,
With—" Keep it, long as you live ! "—to him.

Poems on Children

And his smile, as nymphs from their laving
    meres,
Trembled up from a bath of tears ;
And joy, like a mew sea-rocked apart,
Tossed on the wave of his troubled heart.

For he saw what she did not see,
That—as kindled by its own fervency—
The verge shrivelled inward smoulderingly :
And suddenly 'twixt his hand and hers
He knew the twenty withered years—
No flower, but twenty shrivelled years.

“ Was never such thing until this hour,”
Low to his heart he said ; “ the flower
Of sleep brings wakening to me,
And of oblivion, memory.”

“ Was never this thing to me,” he said,
“ Though with bruised poppies my feet are red ! ”
And again to his own heart very low :
“ O child ! I love, for I love and know ;

“ But you, who love nor know at all
The diverse chambers in Love's guest-hall,
Where some rise early, few sit long :
In how differing accents hear the throng
His great Pentecostal tongue ;

Poems of Francis Thompson

" Who know not love from amity,
Nor my reported self from me ;
A fair fit gift is this, meseems,
You give—this withering flower of dreams.

" O frankly fickle, and fickle true,
Do you know what the days will do to you ?
To your love and you what the days will do,
O frankly fickle, and fickle true ?

" You have loved me, Fair, three lives—or days :
'Twill pass with the passing of my face.
But where I go, your face goes too,
To watch lest I play false to you.

" I am but, my sweet, your foster-lover,
Knowing well when certain years are over
You vanish from me to another ;
Yet I know, and love, like the foster-mother.

" So, frankly fickle, and fickle true !
For my brief life-while I take from you
This token, fair and fit, meseems,
For me—this withering flower of dreams."

The sleep-flower sways in the wheat its head,
Heavy with dreams, as that with bread :
The goodly grain and the sun-flushed sleeper
The reaper reaps, and Time the reaper.

Poems on Children

I hang 'mid men my needless head,
And my fruit is dreams, as theirs is bread :
The goodly men and the sun-hazed sleeper
Time shall reap, but after the reaper
The world shall glean of me, me the sleeper.

Love, love ! your flower of withered dream
In leavèd rhyme lies safe, I deem,
Sheltered and shut in a nook of rhyme,
From the reaper man, and his reaper Time.

Love ! I fall into the claws of Time :
But lasts within a leavèd rhyme
All that the world of me esteems—
My withered dreams, my withered dreams.

TO MONICA THOUGHT DYING

YOU, O the piteous you !
Who all the long night through Anticipatedly
Disclose yourself to me
Already in the ways
Beyond our human comfortable days ;
How can you deem what Death

Poems of Francis Thompson

Impitiously saith
To me, who listening wake
For your poor sake ?
When a grown woman dies
You know we think unceasingly
What things she said, how sweet, how wise ;
And these do make our misery.
But you were (you to me
The dead anticipatedly !)
You—eleven years, was't not, or so ?—
Were just a child, you know ;
And so you never said
Things sweet immeditately and wise
To interdict from closure my wet eyes :
But foolish things, my dead, my dead !
Little and laughable,
Your age that fitted well.
And was it such things all unmemorable,
Was it such things could make
Me sob all night for your implacable sake ?

Yet, as you said to me,
In pretty make-believe of revelry,
So the night long said Death
With his magniloquent breath ;
(And that remembered laughter,
Which in our daily uses followed after,
Was all untuned to pity and to awe :)

Poems on Children

*" A cup of chocolate,
One farthing is the rate,
You drink it through a straw."*

How could I know, how know
Those laughing words when drenched with sobbing so ?

Another voice than yours, than yours, he hath.

My dear, was't worth his breath,
His mighty utterance ?—yet he saith, and saith !
This dreadful Death to his own dreadfulness

Doth dreadful wrong,
This dreadful childish babble on his tongue.
That iron tongue made to speak sentences,
And wisdom insupportably complete,
Why should it only say the long night through,

In mimicry of you,—
*" A cup of chocolate,
One farthing is the rate,
You drink it through a straw, a straw, a straw ! "*

Oh, of all sentences,
Piercingly incomplete !
Why did you teach that fatal mouth to draw,
Child, impermissible awe,
From your old trivialness ?
Why have you done me this
Most unsustainable wrong,
And into Death's control

Poems of Francis Thompson

Betrayed the secret places of my soul?—
Teaching him that his lips,
Uttering their native earthquake and eclipse,
Could never so avail
To rend from hem to hem the ultimate veil
Of this most desolate
Spirit, and leave it stripped and desecrate,—
Nay, never so have wrung
From eyes and speech weakness unmanned, un-meet,
As when his terrible dotage to repeat
Its little lesson learneth at your feet ;
As when he sits among
His sepulchres, to play
With broken toys your hand has cast away,
With derelict trinkets of the darling young.
Why have you taught—that he might so complete
His awful panoply
From your cast playthings—why,
This dreadful childish babble to his tongue,
Dreadful and sweet ?

THE MAKING OF VIOLA

I

The Father of Heaven.

SPIN, daughter Mary, spin,
Twirl your wheel with silver din ;
Spin, daughter Mary, spin,
Spin a tress for Viola.

Angels.

Spin, Queen Mary, a
Brown tress for Viola !

II

The Father of Heaven.

Weave, hands angelical,
Weave a woof of flesh to pall—
Weave, hands angelical—
Flesh to pall our Viola.

Angels.

Weave, singing brothers, a
Velvet flesh for Viola !

The Father of Heaven.

Scoop, young Jesus, for her eyes,
Wood-browed pools of Paradise—

Poems of Francis Thompson

Young Jesus, for the eyes,
For the eyes of Viola.

Angels.

Tint, Prince Jesus, a
Duskèd eye for Viola !

The Father of Heaven.

Cast a star therein to drown,
Like a torch in cavern brown,
Sink a burning star to drown
Whelmed in eyes of Viola.

Angels.

Lave, Prince Jesus, a
Star in eyes of Viola !

V

The Father of Heaven.

Breathe, Lord Paraclete,
To a bubbled crystal meet—
Breathe, Lord Paraclete—
Crystal soul for Viola !

Angels.

Breathe, Regal Spirit, a
Flashing soul for Viola !

Poems on Children

VI

The Father of Heaven.

Child-angels, from your wings
Fall the roseal hoverings,
Child-angels, from your wings,
On the cheeks of Viola.

Angels.

Linger, rosy reflex, a
Quenchless stain, on Viola !

All things being accomplished, saith the Father of Heaven :

Bear her down, and bearing, sing,
Bear her down on spyleless wing,
Bear her down, and bearing, sing,
With a sound of viola.

Music as her name is, a
Sweet sound of Viola !

VIII

Wheeling angels, past espial,
Danced her down with sound of viol ;
Wheeling angels, past espial,
Descanting on " Viola."

Angels.

Sing, in our footing, a Lovely lilt of "Viola!"

IX

Baby smiled, mother wailed,
Earthward while the sweetling sailed;
Mother smiled, baby wailed,
When to earth came Viola.

And her elders shall say:—

So soon have we taught you a
Way to weep, poor Viola!

Smile, sweet baby, smile,
For you will have weeping-while;
Native in your Heaven is smile,—
But your weeping, Viola?

Whence your smiles we know, but ah!
Whence your weeping, Viola?—
Our first gift to you is a Gift of tears, my Viola!

Poems on Children

TO MY GODCHILD,
FRANCIS M. W. M.

THIS labouring, vast, Tellurian galleon,
Riding at anchor off the orient sun,
Had broken its cable, and stood out to space
Down some froze Arctic of the aerial ways :
And now, back warping from the inclement main,
Its vaporous shroudage drenched with icy rain,
It swung into its azure roads again ;
When, floated on the prosperous sun-gale, you
Lit, a white halcyon auspice, 'mid our frozen crew.

To the Sun, stranger, surely you belong,
Giver of golden days and golden song ;
Nor is it by an all-unhappy plan
You bear the name of me, his constant Magian.
Yet ah ! from any other that it came,
Lest fated to my fate you be, as to my name.
When at the first those tidings did they bring,
My heart turned troubled at the ominous thing :
Though well may such a title him endower,
For whom a poet's prayer implores a poet's power.
The Assisian, who kept plighted faith to three,
To Song, to Sanctitude, and Poverty,
(In two alone of whom most singers prove A fatal faithfulness of during love !) ;

Poems of Francis Thompson

He the sweet Sales, of whom we scarcely ken
How God he could love more, he so loved men ;
The crown and crowned of Laura and Italy ;
And Fletcher's fellow—from these, and not from me,
Take you your name, and take your legacy !

Or, if a right successive you declare
When worms, for ivies, intertwine my hair,
Take but this Poesy that now followeth
My clayey hest with sullen servile breath,
Made then your happy freedman by testating death.
My song I do but hold for you in trust,
I ask you but to blossom from my dust.
When you have compassed all weak I began,
Diviner poet, and ah ! diviner man ;
The man at feud with the perduring child
In you before Song's altar nobly reconciled ;
From the wise heavens I half shall smile to see
How little a world, which owned you, needed me.
If, while you keep the vigils of the night,
For your wild tears make darkness all too bright,
Some lone orb through your lonely window peeps,
As it played lover over your sweet sleeps ;
Think it a golden crevice in the sky,
Which I have pierced but to behold you by !

And when, immortal mortal, droops your head,
And you, the child of deathless song, are dead ;

Poems on Children

Then, as you search with unaccustomed glance
The ranks of Paradise for my countenance,
Turn not your tread along the Uranian sod
Among the bearded counsellors of God ;
For if in Eden as on earth are we,
I sure shall keep a younger company :
Pass where beneath their rangèd gonfalons
The starry cohorts shake their shielded suns,
The dreadful mass of their enridgèd spears ;
Pass where majestic the eternal peers,
The stately choice of the great Saintdom, meet—
A silvern segregation, globed complete
In sandalled shadow of the Triune feet ;
Pass by where wait, young poet-wayfarer,
Your cousined clusters, emulous to share
With you the roseal lightnings burning 'mid their hair ;
Pass the crystalline sea, the Lampads seven :—
Look for me in the nurseries of Heaven.

LITTLE JESUS

Ex ore infantium, Deus, et lactentium perfecisti laudem

LITTLE Jesus, was Thou shy
Once, and just so small as I ?
And what did it feel like to be
Out of Heaven, and just like me ?

Poems of Francis Thompson

Didst Thou sometimes think of there,
And ask where all the angels were ?
I should think that I would cry
For my house all made of sky ;
I would look about the air,
And wonder where my angels were ;
And at waking 'twould distress me—
Not an angel there to dress me !
Hadst Thou ever any toys,
Like us little girls and boys ?
And didst Thou play in Heaven with all
The angels that were not too tall,
With stars for marbles ? Did the things
Play Can you see me ? through their wings ?
And did Thy Mother let Thee spoil
Thy robes, with playing on our soil ?
How nice to have them always new
In Heaven, because 'twas quite clean blue !

Didst Thou kneel at night to pray,
And didst Thou join Thy hands, this way ?
And did they tire sometimes, being young,
And make the prayer seem very long ?
And dost Thou like it best, that we Should join our hands to pray to Thee ?
I used to think, before I knew,
The prayer not said unless we do.

Poems on Children

And did Thy Mother at the night
Kiss Thee, and fold the clothes in right ?
And didst Thou feel quite good in bed,
Kissed, and sweet, and Thy prayers said ?

Thou canst not have forgotten all
That it feels like to be small :
And Thou know'st I cannot pray
To Thee in my father's way—
When Thou wast so little, say,
Couldst Thou talk Thy Father's way ?—

So, a little Child, come down
And hear a child's tongue like Thy own ;
Take me by the hand and walk,
And listen to my baby-talk.
To Thy Father show my prayer
(He will look, Thou art so fair),
And say : " O Father, I, Thy Son,
Bring the prayer of a little one."

And He will smile, that children's tongue
Has not changed since Thou wast young !

SISTER SONGS

AN OFFERING TO TWO SISTERS
MONICA AND MADELINE (SYLVIA)

THE PROEM

SHREWD winds and shrill—were these the speech of May ?

A ragged, slag-grey sky—invested so,
Mary's spoilt nursling ! wert thou wont to go ?

Or thou, Sun-god and song-god, say
Could singer pipe one tiniest linner-lay,
While Song did turn away his face from song ?
Or who could be

In spirit or in body hale for long,—
Old Æsculap's best Master !—lacking thee ?

At length, then, thou art here !
On the earth's lethèd ear

Thy voice of light rings out exultant, strong ;
Through dreams she stirs and murmurs at that summons dear :

From its red leash my heart strains tame-
lessly,
For Spring leaps in the womb of the young year !

Sister Songs

Nay, was it not brought forth before,
And we waited, to behold it,
Till the sun's hand should unfold it,
What the year's young bosom bore ?
Even so ; it came, nor knew we that it came,
In the sun's eclipse.
Yet the birds have plighted vows,
And from the branches pipe each other's name ;
Yet the season all the boughs
Has kindled to the finger-tips,—
Mark yonder, how the long laburnum drips
Its jocund spilth of fire, its honey of wild flame !
Yea, and myself put on swift quickening,
And answer to the presence of a sudden Spring.

From cloud-zoned pinnacles of the secret spirit
Song falls precipitant in dizzying streams ;
And, like a mountain-hold when war-shouts stir it,
The mind's recessèd fastness casts to light
Its gleaming multitudes, that from every height
Unfurl the flaming of a thousand dreams.
Now therefore, thou who bring'st the year to birth,
Who guid'st the bare and dabbled feet of May ;
Sweet stem to that rose Christ, who from the earth
Suck'st our poor prayers, conveying them to Him ;
Be aidant, tender Lady, to my lay !
Of thy two maidens somewhat must I say,
Ere shadowy twilight lashes, drooping, dim

Poems of Francis Thompson

Day's dreamy eyes from us ;
Ere eve has struck and furled
The beamy-textured tent transpicious,
Of webbed coerule wrought and woven calms,
Whence has paced forth the lambent-footed sun ;
And thou disclose my flower of song upcurled,
Who from Thy fair irradiant palins
Scatterest all love and loveliness as alms ;
Yea, holy one,
Who coin'st Thyself to beauty for the world !
*Then, Spring's little children, your lauds do ye upraise
To Sylvia, O Sylvia, her sweet, feat ways !
Your lovesome labours lay away,
And trick you out in holiday,
For syllabing to Sylvia ;
And all you birds on branches, lave your mouths with May
To bear with me this burthen,
For singing to Sylvia.*

PART THE FIRST

THE leaves dance, the leaves sing,
The leaves dance in the breath of the Spring.
I bid them dance,
I bid them sing,
For the limpid glance
Of my ladyling ;

Sister Songs

For the gift to the Spring of a dewier spring,
For God's good grace of this ladyling !
I know in the lane, by the hedgerow track,
    The long, broad grasses underneath
Are warted with rain like a toad's knobbed back ;
    But here May weareth a rainless wreath.
In the new-sucked milk of the sun's bosom
Is dabbled the mouth of the daisy-blossom ;
    The smouldering rosebud chars through its sheath
The lily stirs her snowy limbs,
    Ere she swims
Naked up through her cloven green,
Like the wave-born Lady of Love Hellene ;
And the scattered snowdrop exquisite
    Twinkles and gleams,
As if the showers of the sunny beams
Were splashed from the earth in drops of light.
    Everything
    That is child of Spring
Casts its bud or blossoming
Upon the stream of my delight.

*Their voices, that scents are, now let them upraise
To Sylvia, O Sylvia, her sweet, feat ways ;
    Their lovely mother them array,
And prank them out in holiday,
    For syllabbling to Sylvia ;*

Poems of Francis Thompson

*And all the birds on branches lave their mouths with May,
To bear with me this burthen,
For singing to Sylvia.*

While thus I stood in mazes bound
Of vernal sorcery,
I heard a dainty dubious sound,
As of goodly melody ;
Which first was faint as if in swound,
Then burst so suddenly
In warring concord all around,
That, whence this thing might be,
To see
The very marrow longed in me !
It seemed of air, it seemed of ground,
And never any witchery
Drawn from pipe, or reed, or string,
Made such dulcet ravishing.
'Twas like no earthly instrument,
Yet had something of them all
In its rise, and in its fall ;
As if in one sweet consort there were blent
Those archetypes celestial
Which our endeavouring instruments recall.
So heavenly flutes made murmurous plain
To heavenly viols, that again
—Aching with music—wailed back pain ;
Regals release their notes, which rise

Sister Songs

Welling, like tears from heart to eyes ;
And the harp thrills with thronging sighs.
Horns in mellow flattering
Parley with the cithern-string :—
Hark !—the floating, long-drawn note
Woos the throbbing cithern-string !

*Their pretty, pretty prating those citherns sure upraise
For homage unto Sylvia, her sweet, feat ways :
Those flutes do flute their vowelled lay,
Their lovely languid language say,
For lisping to Sylvia ;
Those viols' lissom bowings break the heart of May,
And harps harp their burthen,
For singing to Sylvia.*

Now at that music and that mirth
Rose, as 'twere, veils from earth ;
And I spied
How beside
Bud, bell, bloom, an elf
Stood, or was the flower itself ;
'Mid radiant air
All the fair
Frequence swayed in irised wavers.
Some against the gleaming rims
Their bosoms prest
Of the kingcups, to the brims
Filled with sun, and their white limbs

Poems of Francis Thompson

Bathèd in those golden lavers ;
Some on the brown, glowing breast
Of that Indian maid, the pansy
(Through its tenuous veils confest
Of swathing light), in a quaint fancy
Tied her knot of yellow favours ;
Others dared open draw
Snapdragon's dreadful jaw :
Some, just sprung from out the soil,
Sleeked and shook their rumpled fans
Dropt with sheen
Of moony green ;
Others, not yet extricate,
On their hands leaned their weight,
And writhed them free with mickle toil,
Still folded in their veiny vans :
And all with an unsought accord
Sang together from the sward ;
Whence had come, and from sprites
Yet unseen, those delights,
As of tempered musics blent,
Which had given me such content.
For haply our best instrument,
Pipe or cithern, stopped or strung,
Mimics but some spirit tongue.

*Their amiable voices I bid them upraise
To Sylvia, O Sylvia, her sweet, feat ways ;*

Sister Songs

*Their lovesome labours laid away,
To linger out this holiday
In syllabbling to Sylvia ;
While all the birds on branches lave their mouths with May,
To bear with me this burthen,
For singing to Sylvia.*

Next I saw, wonder-whist,
How from the atmosphere a mist,
So it seemed, slow uprist ;
And, looking from those elfin swarms,
I was 'ware
How the air
Was all populous with forms
Of the Hours, floating down,
Like Nereids through a watery town.
Some, with languors of waved arms,
Fluctuous oared their flexile way ;
Some were borne half resupine
On the ærial hyaline,
Their fluid limbs and rare array
Flickering on the wind, as quivers
Trailing weed in running rivers ;
And others, in far prospect seen,
Newly loosed on this terrene,
Shot in piercing swiftness came,
With hair a-stream like pale and goblin flame.
As crystalline ice in water,

Poems of Francis Thompson

Lay in air each faint daughter ;
Inseparate (or but separate dim)
Circumfused wind from wind-like vest,
Wind-like vest from wind-like limb.
But outward from each lucid breast,
When some passion left its haunt,
Radiate surge of colour came,
Diffusing blush-wise, palpitant,
Dying all the filmy frame.

With some sweet tenderness they would
Turn to an amber-clear and glossy gold ;
Or a fine sorrow, lovely to behold,
Would sweep them as the sun and winds' joined flood

Sweeps a greening-sapphire sea ;
Or they would glow enamouredly
Illustrious sanguine, like a grape of blood ;
Or with mantling poetry
Curd to the tincture which the opal hath,
Like rainbows thawing in a moonbeam bath.
So paled they, flushed they, swam they, sang melodiously.

*Their chanting, soon fading, let them, too, upraise
For homage unto Sylvia, her sweet, feat ways ;
Weave with suave float their waved way,
And colours take of holiday,
For syllabling to Sylvia ;*

Sister Songs

*And all the birds on branches lave their mouths with May,
To bear with me this burthen,
For singing to Sylvia.*

Then, through those translucencies,
As grew my senses clearer clear,
Did I see, and did I hear,
How under an elm's canopy
Wheeled a flight of Dryades
Murmuring measured melody.
Gyre in gyre their treading was,
Wheeling with an adverse flight,
In twi-circle o'er the grass,
These to left, and those to right ;
    All the band
Linkèd by each other's hand ;
Decked in raiment stained as
The blue-helmèd aconite.
And they advance with flutter, with grace,
    To the dance,
Moving on with a dainty pace,
As blossoms mince it on river swells.
Over their heads their cymbals shine,
Round each ankle gleams a twine
    Of twinkling bells—
Tune twirled golden from their cells.
Every step was a tinkling sound,
As they glanced in their dancing-ground.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Clouds in cluster with such a sailing
Float o'er the light of the wasting moon,
As the cloud of their gliding veiling
Swung in the sway of the dancing-tune.
There was the clash of their cymbals clanging,
Ringing of swinging bells clinging their feet ;
And the clang on wing it seemed a-hanging,
Hovering round their dancing so fleet.—
I stirred, I rustled more than meet ;
Whereat they broke to the left and right,
With eddying robes like aconite
    Blue of helm ;
And I beheld to the foot o' the elm.

*They have not tripped those dances, betrayed to my gaze,
To glad the heart of Sylvia, beholding of their maze ;
    Through barky walls have slid away,
    And tricked them in their holiday,
        For other than for Sylvia ;
While all the birds on branches lave their mouths with May,
    And bear with me this burthen,
        For singing to Sylvia.*

Where its umbrage was enrooted,
    Sat, white-suited,
Sat, green-amiced and bare-footed,
    Spring, amid her minstrelsy ;
There she sat amid her ladies,
    Where the shade is

Sister Songs

Sheen as Enna mead ere Hades'
Gloom fell 'thwart Persephone.
Dewy buds were interstrown
Through her tresses hanging down,
And her feet
Were most sweet,
Tinged like sea-stars, rosied brown.
A throng of children like to flowers were sown
About the grass beside, or clomb her knee :
I looked who were that favoured company.
And one there stood
Against the beamy flood
Of sinking day, which, pouring its abundance,
Sublimed the illuminous and volute redundance
Of locks that, half dissolving, floated round her face ;
As see I might
Far off a lily-cluster poised in sun
Dispread its gracile curls of light.
I knew what chosen child was there in place !
I knew there might no brows be, save of one,
With such Hesperian fulgence compassèd,
Which in her moving seemed to wheel about her head.

*O Spring's little children, more loud your lauds upraise
For this is even Sylvia, with her sweet, feat ways !
Your lovesome labours lay away,
And prank you out in holiday,*

Poems of Francis Thompson

*For syllabbling to Sylvia ;
And all you birds on branches, lave your mouths with May.
To bear with me this burthen,
For singing to Sylvia !*

Spring, goddess, is it thou, desired long ?
And art thou girded round with this young train ?—
If ever I did do thee ease in song,
Now of thy grace let me one meed obtain,
    And list thou to one plain.
    Oh, keep still in thy train,
After the years when others therefrom fade,
    This tiny, well-belovèd maid !
To whom the gate of my heart's fortalice,
    With all which in it is,
And the shy self who doth therein immew him
'Gainst what loud leaguerers battailously woo him,
    I, bribèd traitor to him,
    Set open for one kiss.

*Then suffer, Spring, thy children, that lauds they should upraise
To Sylvia, this Sylvia, her sweet, feat ways ;
    Their lovely labours lay away,
    And trick them out in holiday,
    For syllabbling to Sylvia ;
And that all birds on branches lave their mouths with May,
    To bear with me this burthen,
    For singing to Sylvia.*

Sister Songs

A kiss ? for a child's kiss ?
Aye, goddess, even for this.
Once, bright Sylviola, in days not far,
Once—in that nightmare-time which still doth haunt
My dreams, a grim, unbidden visitant—
Forlorn, and faint, and stark,
I had endured through watches of the dark
The abashless inquisition of each star,
Yea, was the outcast mark
Of all those heavenly passers' scrutiny ;
Stood bound and helplessly
For Time to shoot his barbèd minutes at me ;
Suffered the trampling hoof of every hour
In night's slow-wheeled car ;
Until the tardy dawn dragged me at length
From under those dread wheels ; and, bled of strength,
I waited the inevitable last.
Then there came past
A child ; like thee, a spring-flower ; but a flower
Fallen from the budded coronal of Spring,
And through the city-streets blown withering.
She passed,—O brave, sad, lovingest, tender thing !—
And of her own scant pittance did she give,
That I might eat and live :
Then fled, a swift and trackless fugitive.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Therefore I kissed in thee
The heart of Childhood, so divine for me ;
And her, through what sore ways,
And what unchildish days,
Borne from me now, as then, a trackless fugitive.
There I kissed in thee
Her, child ! and innocence,
And spring, and all things that have gone from me,
And that shall never be ;
All vanished hopes, and all most hopeless bliss,
Came with thee to my kiss.
And ah ! so long myself had strayed afar
From child, and woman, and the boon earth's green,
And all wherewith life's face is fair beseen ;
Journeying its journey bare
Five suns, except of the all-kissing sun
Unkissed of one ;
Almost I had forgot
The healing harms,
And whitest witchery, a-lurk in that
Authentic cestus of two girdling arms :
And I remembered not
The subtle sanctities which dart
From childish lips' unvalued precious brush,
Nor how it makes the sudden lilies push
Between the loosening fibres of the heart.
Then, that thy little kiss
Should be to me all this,

Sister Songs

Let workaday wisdom blink sage lids thereat ;
Which towers a flight three hedgerows high, poor bat !

And straightway charts me out the empyreal air.

Its chart I wing not by, its canon of worth
Scorn not, nor reck though mine should breed it mirth :

And howso thou and I may be disjoint,
Yet still my falcon spirit makes her point
Over the covert where

Thou, sweetest quarry, hast put in from her !

*(Soul, hush these sad numbers, too sad to upraise
In hymning bright Sylvia, unlearn'd in such ways !*

*Our mournful moods lay we away,
And prank our thoughts in holiday,*

For syllabbling to Sylvia ;

*When all the birds on branches lave their mouths with May,
To bear with us this burthen,
For singing to Sylvia !)*

Then thus Spring, bounteous lady, made reply :

" O lover of me and all my progeny,

For grace to you

I take her ever to my retinue.

Over thy form, dear child, alas ! my art

Poems of Francis Thompson

Cannot prevail ; but mine immortalizing
    Touch I lay upon thy heart.
    Thy soul's fair shape
In my unfading mantle's green I drape,
And thy white mind shall rest by my devising
    A Gideon-fleece amid life's dusty drouth.
If Even burst yon globèd yellow grape
(Which is the sun to mortals' sealèd sight)
    Against her stainèd mouth ;
    Or if white-handed light
Draw thee yet dripping from the quiet pools,
    Still lucencies and cools,
Of sleep, which all night mirror constellate dreams ;
Like to the sign which led the Israelite,
    Thy soul, through day or dark,
A visible brightness on the chosen ark
    Of thy sweet body and pure,
    Shall it assure,
With auspice large and tutelary gleams,
Appointed solemn courts, and covenanted streams."

*Cease, Spring's little children, now cease your lauds to raise,
That dream is past, and Sylvia, with her sweet, feat ways.
    Our lovèd labour, laid away,
Is smoothly ended ; said our say,
    Our syllabling to Sylvia.*

Sister Songs

*Make sweet, you birds on branches ! make sweet your mouths with May !
But borne is this burthen,
Sung unto Sylvia.*

PART THE SECOND

AND now, thou elder nursling of the nest ;
Ere all the intertangled west
Be one magnificence
Of multitudinous blossoms that o'errun
The flaming brazen bowl o' the burnished sun
Which they do flower from,
How shall I 'stablish thy memorial ?
Nay, how or with what countenance shall I come
To plead in my defence
For loving thee at all ?
I who can scarcely speak my fellows' speech,
Love their love, or mine own love to them teach ;
A bastard barred from their inheritance,
Who seem, in this dim shape's uneasy nook,
Some sun-flower's spirit which by luckless chance
Has mournfully its tenement mistook ;
When it were better in its right abode,
Heartless and happy lackeying its god.

Poems of Francis Thompson

How com'st thou, little tender thing of white,
Whose very touch full scantily me be seems,
How com'st thou resting on my vaporous dreams,
    Kindling a wraith there of earth's vernal green ?
    Even so as I have seen,
    In night's ærial sea with no wind blust'rous,
A ribbed tract of cloudy malachite
    Curve a shored crescent wide ;
And on its slope marge shelving to the night
    The stranded moon lay quivering like a lustrous
    Medusa newly washed up from the tide,
Lay in an oozy pool of its own deliquious light.

Yet hear how my excuses may prevail, .
    Nor, tender white orb, be thou opposite !
Life and life's beauty only hold their revels
In the abysmal ocean's luminous levels.
There, like the phantasms of a poet pale,
    The exquisite marvels sail :
Clarified silver ; greens and azures frail
As if the colours sighed themselves away,
And blent in supersubtile interplay
    As if they swooned into each other's arms ,
    Reputed vermilion,
    Like ear-tips 'gainst the sun ;
And beings that, under night's swart pinion,
Make every wave upon the harbour-bars
    A beaten yolk of stars.

Sister Songs

But where day's glance turns baffled from the deeps,
Die out those lovely swarms ;
And in the immense profound no creature glides or creeps.

Love and love's beauty only hold their revels
In life's familiar, penetrable levels :
What of its ocean-floor ?
I dwell there evermore.
From almost earliest youth
I raised the lids o' the truth,
And forced her bend on me her shrinking sight ;
Ever I knew me Beauty's eremite,
In antre of this lowly body set,
Girt with a thirsty solitude of soul.
Natheless I not forget
How I have, even as the anchorite,
I too, imperishing essences that console.
Under my ruined passions, fallen and sere,
The wild dreams stir like little radiant girls
Whom in the moulted plumage of the year
Their comrades sweet have buried to the curls.
Yet, though their dedicated amorist,
How often do I bid my visions hie,
Deaf to them, pleading all their piteous fills ;
Who weep, as weep the maidens of the mist
Clinging the necks of the unheeding hills :

Poems of Francis Thompson

And their tears wash them lovelier than before,
That from grief's self our sad delight grows more.
Fair are the soul's uncrispèd calms, indeed,
    Endiapered with many a spiritual form
    Of blosmy-tinctured weed ;

But scarce itself is conscious of the store
    Suckled by it, and only after storm
Casts up its loosened thoughts upon the shore.

    To this end my deeps are stirred ;
    And I deem well why life unshared
    Was ordainèd me of yore.

In pairing-time, we know, the bird
Kindles to its deepmost splendour,

    And the tender

    Voice is tenderest in its throat :
Were its love, for ever nigh it,

    Never by it,

    It might keep a vernal note,
The crocean and amethystine

    In their pristine

    Lustre linger on its coat.

Therefore must my song-bower lone be,
    That my tone be

    Fresh with dewy pain alway ;

She, who scorns my dearest care ta'en,
    An uncertain

    Shadow of the sprite of May.

And is my song sweet, as they say ?

Sister Songs

'Tis sweet for one whose voice has no reply,
                    Save silence's sad cry :
And are its plumes a burning bright array ?
They burn for an unincarnated eye.
A bubble, charioteered by the inward breath
            Which, ardent for its own invisible lure,
Urges me glittering to ærial death,
            I am rapt towards that bodiless paramour ;
Blindly the uncomprehended tyranny
            Obeying of my heart's impetuous might.
            The earth and all its planetary kin,
Starry buds tangled in the whirling hair
That flames round the Phœbean wassailer,
            Speed no more ignorant, more predestined flight,
            Than I, her viewless tresses netted in.
As some most beautiful one, with lovely taunting,
Her eyes of guileless guile o'ercanopies,
            Does her hid visage bow,
And miserly your covetous gaze allow,
            By inchmeal, coy degrees,
            Saying—" Can you see me now ? "
Yet from the mouth's reflex you guess the wanting
            Smile of the coming eyes
In all their upturned grievous witcheries,
            Before that sunbreak rise ;
And each still hidden feature view within
Your mind, as eager scrutinies detail

Poems of Francis Thompson

The moon's young rondure through the shamefast veil

Drawn to her gleaming chin :

After this wise,

From the enticing smile of earth and skies

I dream my unknown Fair's refusèd gaze ;

And guessingly her love's close traits devise,

Which she with subtile coquetries

Through little human glimpses slow displays,

Cozening my mateless days

By sick, intolerable delays.

And so I keep mine uncompanioned ways ;

And so my touch, to golden poesies

Turning love's bread, is bought at hunger's price.

So,—in the inextinguishable wars

Which roll song's Orient on the sullen night

Whose ragged banners in their own despite

Take on the tinges of the hated light,—

So Sultan Phœbus has his Janizars.

But if mine unappeasèd cicatrices

Might get them lawful ease ;

Were any gentle passion hallowed me,

Who must none other breath of passion feel

Save such as winnows to the fledgèd heel

The tremulous Paradisal plumages ;

The conscious sacramental trees

Which ever be

Shaken celestially,

Sister Songs

Consentient with enamoured wings, might know my love for thee.

Yet is there more, whereat none guesseth, love !

Upon the ending of my deadly night
(Whereof thou hast not the surmise, and slight
Is all that any mortal knows thereof),

Thou wert to me that earnest of day's light,

When, like the back of a gold-mailed saurian
Heaving its slow length from Nilotic slime,
The first long gleaming fissure runs Aurorian
Athwart the yet dun firmament of prime.

Stretched on the margin of the cruel sea

Whence they had rescued me,

With faint and painful pulses was I lying ;

Not yet discerning well

If I had 'scaped, or were an icicle,

Whose thawing is its dying.

Like one who sweats before a despot's gate,

Summoned by some presaging scroll of fate,

And knows not whether kiss or dagger wait ;

And all so sickened is his countenance,

The courtiers buzz, " Lo, doomed ! " and look at him askance :—

At Fate's dread portal then

Even so stood I, I ken,

Even so stood I, between a joy and fear,

Poems of Francis Thompson

And said to mine own heart, " Now if the end be here ! "

They say, Earth's beauty seems completest

To them that on their death-beds rest ;

Gentle lady ! she smiles sweetest

Just ere she clasps us to her breast.

And I,—now my Earth's countenance grew bright,
Did she but smile me towards that nuptial-night ?
But, whileas on such dubious bed I lay,

One unforgotten day,

As a sick child waking sees

Wide-eyed daisies

Gazing on it from its hand,

Slipped there for irs dear amazes ;

So between thy father's knees

I saw thee stand,

And through my hazes

Of pain and fear thine eyes' young wonder shone.

Then, as flies scatter from a carrion,

Or rooks in spreading gyres like broken smoke

Wheel, when some sound their quietude has broke,

Fled, at thy countenance, all that doubting spawn :

The heart which I had questioned spoke,

A cry impetuous from its depths was drawn,—

" I take the omen of this face of dawn ! "

Sister Songs

And with the omen to my heart cam'st thou.
Even with a spray of tears
That one light draft was fixed there for the years.

And now ?—

The hours I tread ooze memories of thee, Sweet,
Beneath my casual feet.
With rainfall as the lea,
The day is drenched with thee ;
In little exquisite surprises
Bubbling deliciousness of thee arises
From sudden places,
Under the common traces
Of my most lethargied and customed paces.

As an Arab journeyeth
Through a sand of Ayaman,
Lean Thirst, lolling its cracked tongue,
Lagging by his side along ;
And a rusty-wingèd Death
Grating its low flight before,
Casting ribbèd shadows o'er
The blank desert, blank and tan :
He lifts by hap toward where the morning's roots are

His weary stare,—
Sees, although they plashless mutes are,
Set in a silver air

Poems of Francis Thompson

Fountains of gelid shoots are,
Making the daylight fairest fair ;
Sees the palm and tamarind
Tangle the tresses of a phantom wind ;—
A sight like innocence when one has sinned !
A green and maiden freshness smiling there,
While with unblinking glare
The tawny-hided desert crouches watching her.

'Tis a vision :
Yet the greeneries Elysian
He has known in tracts afar ;
Thus the enamouring fountains flow,
Those the very palms that grow,
By rate-gummed Sava, or Herbalimar.—
Such a watered dream has tarried
Trembling on my desert arid ;
Even so
Its lovely gleamings
Seemings show
Of things not seemings ;
And I gaze,
Knowing that, beyond my ways,
Verily
All these are, for these are She.

Eve no gentlier lays her cooling cheek

Sister Songs

On the burning brow of the sick earth,
Sick with death, and sick with birth,
Æon to æon, in secular fever twirled,
Than thy shadow soothes this weak
And distempered being of mine.
In all I work, my hand includeth thine ;
Thou rushest down in every stream
Whose passion frets my spirit's deepening gorge ;
Unhood'st mine eyas-heart, and fliest my dream ;
Thou swing'st the hammers of my forge ;
As the innocent moon, that nothing does but shine,
Moves all the labouring surges of the world.
Pierce where thou wilt the springing thought in me,
And there thy pictured countenance lies enfurled,
As in the cut fern lies the imaged tree.
This poor song that sings of thee,
This fragile song, is but a curled
Shell outgathered from thy sea,
And murmurous still of its nativity.
Princess of Smiles,
Sorceress of most unlawful-lawful wiles,
Cunning pit for gazers' senses,
Overstrewn with innocences !
Purities gleam white like statues
In the fair lakes of thine eyes,
And I watch the sparkles that use

Poems of Francis Thompson

There to rise,
Knowing these
Are bubbles from the calyces
Of the lovely thoughts that breathe
Paving, like water-flowers, thy spirit's floor beneath.

O thou most dear !
Who art thy sex's complex harmony
God-set more facilely ;
To thee may love draw near
Without one blame or fear,
Unhidden save by his humility :
Thou Perseus' Shield wherein I view secure
The mirrored Woman's fateful-fair allure !
Whom Heaven still leaves a twofold dignity,
As girlhood gentle, and as boyhood free ;
With whom no most diaphanous webs enwind
The bare limbs of the rebukeless mind.
Wild Dryad, all unconscious of thy tree,
With which indissolubly
The tyrannous time shall one day make thee whole ;
Whose frank arms pass unfretted through its bole ;
Who wear'st thy femininity
Light as entrailèd blossoms, that shalt find
It erelong silver shackles unto thee :
Thou whose young sex is yet but in thy soul ;—
As hoarded in the vine
Hang the gold skins of undelirious wine,

Sister Songs

As air sleeps, till it toss its limbs in breeze ;—
In whom the mystery which lures and sunders,
Grapples and thrusts apart, endears, estranges,
—The dragon to its own Hesperides—
Is gated under slow-revolving changes,
Manifold doors of heavy-hinged years :—
So once, ere Heaven's eyes were filled with wonders
To see Laughter rise from Tears,
Lay in beauty not yet mighty,
Conched in translucencies,
The antenatal Aphrodite,
Caved magically under magic seas ;
Caved dreamlessly beneath the dreamful seas.

“ Whose sex is in thy soul ! ”
What think we of thy soul ?
Which has no parts, and cannot grow,
Unfurled not from an embryo ;
Born of full stature, lineal to control ;
And yet a pigmy's yoke must undergo :
Yet must keep pace and tarry, patient, kind,
With its unwilling scholar, the dull, tardy mind ;
Must be obsequious to the body's powers,
Whose low hands mete its paths, set ope and close its ways ;
Must do obeisance to the days,
And wait the little pleasure of the hours ;

Poems of Francis Thompson

Yea, ripe for kingship, yet must be
Captive in statuted minority !
So is all power fulfilled, as soul in thee.
So still the ruler by the ruled takes rule,
And wisdom weaves itself i' the loom o' the fool.
The splendent sun no splendour can display,
Till on gross things he dash his broken ray,
From cloud and tree and flower re-tossed in prismatic spray.

Did not obstruction's vessel hem it in,
Force were not force, would spill itself in vain ;
We know the Titan by his champèd chain.
Stay is heat's cradle, it is rocked therein,
And by check's hand is burnished into light ;
If hate were none, would love burn lowlier bright ?
God's Fair were guessed scarce but for opposite sin ;
Yea, and His Mercy, I do think it well,
Is flashed back from the brazen gates of Hell.

The heavens decree
All power fulfil itself as soul in thee.
For supreme Spirit subject was to clay,
And Law from its own servants learned a law,
And Light besought a lamp unto its way,
And Awe was reined in awe,
At one small house of Nazareth ;
And Golgotha
Saw Breath to breathlessness resign its breath,
And Life do homage for its crown to death.

Sister Songs

So is all power, as soul in thee, increased !
But, knowing this, in knowledge's despite
I fret against the law severe that stains
Thy spirit with eclipse ;
When—as a nymph's carven head sweet water
drips,
For others oozing so the cool delight
Which cannot steep her stiffened mouth of stone—
Thy nescient lips repeat maternal strains.
Memnonian lips !
Smitten with singing from thy mother's East,
And murmurous with music not their own :
Nay, the lips flexile, while the mind alone
A passionless statue stands.
Oh, pardon, innocent one !
Pardon at thine unconscious hands !
“ Murmurous with music not their own,” I say ?
And in that saying how do I missay,
When from the common sands
Of poorest common speech of common day
Thine accents sift the golden musics out !
And ah, we poets, I misdoubt,
Are little more than thou !
We speak a lesson taught we know not how,
And what it is that from us flows
The hearer better than the utterer knows.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Thou canst foreshape thy word ;
The poet is not lord
Of the next syllable may come
With the returning pendulum ;
And what he plans to-day in song,
To-morrow sings it in another tongue.
Where the last leaf fell from his bough,
He knows not if a leaf shall grow ;
Where he sows he doth not reap,
He reapeth where he did not sow ;
He sleeps, and dreams forsake his sleep
To meet him on his waking way.
Vision will mate him not by law and vow :
Disguised in life's most hodden-grey,
By the most beaten road of everyday
She waits him, unsuspected and unknown.
The hardest pang whereon
He lays his mutinous head may be a Jacob's stone.
In the most iron crag his foot can tread
A Dream may strew her bed,
And suddenly his limbs entwine,
And draw him down through rock as sea-nymphs might through brine.
But, unlike those feigned temptress-ladies who
In guerdon of a night the lover slew,
When the embrace has failed, the rapture fled,
Not he, not he, the wild sweet witch is dead !
And though he cherisheth

Sister Songs

The babe most strangely born from out her death,
Some tender trick of her it hath, maybe,—
It is not she !

Yet, even as the air is rumorous of fray
Before the first shafts of the sun's onslaught
From gloom's black harness splinter,
And Summer move on Winter
With the trumpet of the March, and the pennon of the May ;

As gesture outstrips thought ;
So, haply, toyer with ethereal strings,
Are thy blind repetitions of high things
The murmurous gnats whose aimless hoverings
Reveal song's summer in the air ;
The outstretched hand, which cannot thought declare,

Yet is thought's harbinger.
These strains the way for thine own strains prepare ;

We feel the music moist upon this breeze,
And hope the congregating poesies.

Sundered yet by thee from us
Wait, with wild eyes luminous,
All thy wingèd things that are to be ;
They slit against thee, Gate of Ivory !
They clamour on the portress Destiny,—
“ Set her wide, so we may issue through,

Poems of Francis Thompson

Our vans are quick for that they have to do ! ”
Suffer still your young desire ;
Your plumes but bicker at the tips with fire ;
Tarry their kindling—they will beat the higher.
And thou, bright girl, not long shalt thou repeat
Idly the music from thy mother caught ;
Not vainly has she wrought,
Not vainly from the cloudward-jetting turret
Of her ærial mind, for thy weak feet,
Let down the silken ladder of her thought.
She bare thee with a double pain,
Of the body and the spirit ;
Thou thy fleshly weeds hast ta'en,
Thy diviner weeds inherit !
The precious streams which through thy young lips roll
Shall leave their lovely delta in thy soul :
Where sprites of so essential kind
Set their paces,
Surely they shall leave behind
The green traces
Of their sportance in the mind ;
And thou shalt, ere we well may know it,
Turn that daintiness, a poet,—
Elfin-ring
Where sweet fancies foot and sing.
So it may be, so it shall be,—
Oh, take the prophecy from me !

Sister Songs

What if the old fastidious sculptor, Time,
    This crescent marvel of his hands
    Carveth all too painfully,
And I who prophesy shall never see ?
What if the niche of its predestined rhyme,
    Its aching niche, too long expectant stands ?
    Yet shall he after sore delays
    On some exultant day of days
    The white enshrouding childhood raise
From thy fair spirit, finished for our gaze ;
    While we (but 'mongst that happy " we "
    The prophet cannot be !)—
While we behold with no astonishments,
With that serene fulfilment of delight
    Wherewith we view the sight
    When the stars pitch the golden tents
Of their high campment on the plains of night.
Why should amazement be our satellite ?
    What wonder in such things ?
If angels have hereditary wings,
    If not by Salic law is handed down
    The poet's crown,
To thee, born in the purple of the throne,
    The laurel must belong :
    Thou, in thy mother's right
Descendant of Castalian-chrismèd kings—
    O Princess of the Blood of Song !

Poems of Francis Thompson

Peace ! too impetuously have I been winging Toward vaporous heights which beckon and beguile.

I sink back, saddened to my inmost mind ;
Even as I list a-dream that mother singing
The poesy of sweet tone, and sadden while
Her voice is cast in troubled wake behind
The keel of her keen spirit. Thou art enshrined

In a too primal innocence for this eye—
Intent on such untempered radiancy—
Not to be pained ; my clay can scarce endure
Ungrieved the effluence near of essences so pure.

Therefore, little tender maiden,
Never be thou overshadowen
With a mind whose canopy
Would shut out the sky from thee ;
Whose tangled branches intercept Heaven's light :
I will not feed my unpastured heart

On thee, green pleasaunce as thou art,
To lessen by one flower thy happy daisies white.
The water-rat is earth-hued like the runlet

Whereon he swims ; and how in me should lurk

Thoughts apt to neighbour thine, thou creature sunlit ?

If through long fret and irk
Thine eyes within their browed recesses were

Sister Songs

Worn caves where thought lay couchant in its lair ;
Wert thou a spark among dank leaves, ah ruth !
With age in all thy veins, while all thy heart was youth ;

Our contact might run smooth.
But life's Eoan dews still moist thy ringèd hair ;
Dian's chill finger-tips
Thaw if at night they happen on thy lips ;
The flying fringes of the sun's cloak frush
The fragile leaves which on those warm lips blush ;
And joy only lurks retirèd
In the dim gloaming of thine irid.

Then since my love drags this poor shadow, me,
And one without the other may not be,
From both I guard thee free.

It still is much, yes, it is much,
Only—my dream !—to love my love of thee ;
And it is much, yes, it is much;
In hands which thou hast touched to feel thy touch,

In voices which have mingled with thine own
To hear a double tone.

As anguish, for supreme expression prest,
Borrows its saddest tongue from jest,
Thou hast of absence so create
A presence more importunate ;
And thy voice pleads its sweetest suit
When it is mute.

Poems of Francis Thompson

I thank the once accursèd star
Which did me teach
To make of Silence my familiar,
Who hath the rich reversion of thy speech,
Since the most charming sounds thy thought can wear,
Cast off, fall to that pale attendant's share ;
And thank the gift which made my mind
A shadow-world, wherethrough the shadows wind
Of all the loved and lovely of my kind.

Like a maiden Saxon, folden,
As she flits, in moon-drenched mist ;
Whose curls streaming flaxen-golden,
By the misted moonbeams kist,
Dispread their filmy floating silk
Like honey steeped in milk :
So, vague goldenness remote,
Through my thoughts I watch thee float.
When the snake summer casts her blazoned skin
We find it at the turn of autumn's path,
And think it summer that rewinded hath,
Joying therein ;
And this enamouring slough of thee, mine elf,
I take it for thyself ;
Content. Content ? Yea, title it content.
The very loves that belt thee must prevent
My love, I know, with their legitimacy :

Sister Songs

As the metallic vapours, that are swept
Athwart the sun, in his light intercept
The very hues
Which their conflagrant elements effuse.
But, my love, my heart, my fair,
That only I should see thee rare,
Or tent to the hid core thy rarity,—
This were a mournfulness more piercing far
Than that those other loves my own must bar,
Or thine for others leave thee none for me.

But on a day whereof I think,
One shall dip his hand to drink
In that still water of thy soul,
And its imaged tremors race
Over thy joy-troubled face,
As the intervolved reflections roll
From a shaken fountain's brink,
With swift light wrinkling its alcove.
From the hovering wing of Love
The warm stain shall flit roseal on thy cheek.
Then, sweet blushet ! whenas he,
The destined paramount of thy universe,
Who has no worlds to sigh for, ruling thee,
Ascends his vermeil throne of empery,
One grace alone I seek.
Oh ! may this treasure-galleon of my verse,

Poems of Francis Thompson

Fraught with its golden passion, oared with cadent rhyme,
Set with a towering press of fantasies,
Drop safely down the tinie,
Leaving mine isled self behind it far
Soon to be sunken in the abysm of seas
(As down the years the splendour voyages
From some long ruined and night-submerged star),
And in thy subject sovereign's havening heart
Anchor the freightage of its virgin ore ;
Adding its wasteful more
To his own overflowing treasury.
So through his river mine shall reach thy sea,
Bearing its confluent part ;
In his pulse mine shall thrill ;
And the quick heart shall quicken from the heart that's still.

Ah, help, my Dæmon that hast served me well !
Not at this last, oh, do not me disgrace !
I faint, I sicken, darkens all my sight,
As, poised upon this unprevisioned height,
I lift into its place
The utmost aery traceried pinnacle.
So ; it is builded, the high tenement,
—God grant—to mine intent :
Most like a palace of the Occident,

Sister Songs

Up-thrusting, toppling maze on maze,
    Its moulded blaze,
And washèd by the sunset's rosy waves,
Whose sea drinks rarer hue from those rare walls it laves.

    Yet wail, my spirits, wail !
So few therein to enter shall prevail.
Scarce fewer could win way, if their desire
A dragon baulked, with involuted spire,
And writhen snout spattered with yeasty fire.
For at the elfin portal hangs a horn
    Which none can wind aright
    Save the appointed knight
Whose lids the fay-wings brushed when he was born.
    All others stray forlorn,
Or glimpsing, through the blazoned windows
    scrolled,
Receding labyrinths lessening tortuously
    In half obscurity ;
With mystic images, inhuman, cold,
    That flameless torches hold.
    But who can wind that horn of might
(The horn of dead Heliades) aright,— Straight
Open for him shall roll the conscious gate ;
And light leap up from all the torches there,
And life leap up in every torchbearer,
And the stone faces kindle in the glow,

Poems of Francis Thompson

And into the blank eyes the irids grow,
And through the dawning irids ambushed meanings show.

    Illumined this wise on,
He threads securely the far intricacies,
    With brede from Heaven's wrought vesture overstrewn ;

Swift Tellus' purpled tunic, girt upon
With the blown chlamys of her fluttering seas ;
    And the freaked kirtle of the pearlèd moon :
Until he gain the structure's core, where stands—
    A toil of magic hands—

The unbodied spirit of the sorcerer,
    Most strangely rare,
    As is a vision remembered in the noon ;
Unbodied, yet to mortal seeing clear,
Like sighs exhaled in eager atmosphere.
From human haps and mutabilities
It rests exempt, beneath the edifice

    To which itself gave rise ;
Sustaining centre to the bubble of stone
Which, breathed from it, exists by it alone.
Yea, ere Saturnian earth her child consumes,

    And I lie down with outworn ossuaries,
Ere death's grim tongue anticipates the tomb's
    Siste viator, in this storied urn

    My living heart is laid to throb and burn,
Till end be ended, and till ceasing cease.

Sister Songs

And thou by whom this strain hath parentage ;
    Wantoner between the yet untreachorous claws
    Of newly-whelped existence ! ere he pause,
What gift to thee can yield the archimage ?
    For coming seasons' frets
    What aids, what amulets,
    What softenings, or what brightenings ?
As Thunder writhes the lash of his long lighthings
    About the growling heads of the brute main
    Foaming at mouth, until it wallow again
    In the scooped oozes of its bed of pain ;
So all the gnashing jaws, the leaping heads
Of hungry menaces, and of ravening dreads,
    Of pangs
Twitch-lipped, with quivering nostrils and im-
    mitigate fangs,
I scourge beneath the torment of my charms
That their relentless nature fear to work thee harms.
And as yon Apollonian harp-player,
    Yon wandering psalterist of the sky,
With flickering strings which scatter melody,
The silver-stoled damsels of the sea,
    Or lake, or fount, or stream,
Enchants from their ancestral heaven of waters
To Naiad it through the unfrothing air ;
    My song enchants so out of undulous
    dream

Poems of Francis Thompson

The glimmering shapes of its dim-tressed daughters,
And missions each to be thy minister,
Saying : " O ye,
The organ-stops of being's harmony ;
The blushes on existence's pale face,
Lending it sudden grace ;
Without whom we should but guess Heaven's worth
By blank negations of this sordid earth
(So haply to the blind may light
Be but gloom's undetermined opposite) ;
Ye who are thus as the refracting air
Whereby we see Heaven's sun before it rise
Above the dull line of our mortal skies ;
As breathing on the strained ear that sighs
From comrades viewless unto strained eyes,
Soothing our terrors in the lampless night ;
Ye who can make this world, where all is deeming,
What world ye list, being arbiters of seeming ;
Attend upon her ways, benignant powers !
Unroll ye life a carpet for her feet,
And cast ye down before them blossomy hours,
Until her going shall be clogged with sweet !
All dear emotions whose new-bathed hair,
Still streaming from the soul, in love's warm air
Smokes with a mist of tender fantasies ;
All these,

Sister Songs

And all the heart's wild growths which, swiftly bright,
Spring up the crimson agarics of a night,
No pain in withering, yet a joy arisen ;
And all thin shapes more exquisitely rare,
More subtly fair,
Than these weak ministering words have spell to prison
Within the magic circle of this rhyme ;
And all the fays who in our creedless clime
Have sadly ceased,
Bearing to other children childhood's proper feast ;
Whose robes are fluent crystal, crocus-hued,
Whose wings are wind a-fire, whose mantles wrought
From spray that falling rainbows shake to air ;
These, ye familiars to my wizard thought,
Make things of journal custom unto her ;
With lucent feet imbrued,
If young Day tread, a glorious vintager,
The wine-press of the purple-foamed east ;
Or round the nodding sun, flush-faced and sunken,
His wild Bacchantes drunken
Reel, with rent woofs a-flaunt, their westering rout.

—But lo ! at length the day is lingered out,
At length my Ariel lays his viol by ;
We sing no more to thee, child, he and I ;
The day is lingered out :

Poems of Francis Thompson

In slow wreaths folden
Around yon censer, spherèd, golden,
Vague Vesper's fumes aspire ;
And, glimmering to eclipse,
The long laburnum drips
Its honey of wild flame, its jocund spilth of fire.

*Now pass your ways, fair bird, and pass your ways,
If you will ;
I have you through the days !
And flit or hold you still,
And perch you where you list
On what wrist,—
You are mine through the times !
I have caught you fast for ever in a tangle of sweet rhymes.
And in your young maiden morn
You may scorn,
But you must be
Bound and sociate to me ;
With this thread from out the tomb my dead hand shall tether thee !*

---

Go, Sister-songs, to that sweet Sister-pair
For whom I have your frail limbs fashioned,
And framed feateously ;—
For whom I have your frail limbs fashioned
With how great shamefastness and how great dread,

Sister Songs

Knowing you frail, but not if you be fair,
    Though framèd feateously ;—
    Go unto them from me.
Go from my shadow to their sunshine sight,
    Made for all sights' delight ;
Go like twin swans that oar the surgy storms
To bate with pennoned snows in candent air :
    Nigh with abasèd head,
Yourselves linked sisterly, that Sister-pair,
    And go in presence there ;
Saying—" Your young eyes cannot see our forms,
Nor read the yearning of our looks aright ;
But time shall trail the veilings from our hair,
And cleanse your seeing with his euphrasy
(Yea, even your bright seeing make more bright,
    Which is all sights' delight),
And ye shall know us for what things we be.

" Whilom, within a poet's calyxed heart,
A dewy love we trembled all apart ;
    Whence it took rise
    Beneath your radiant eyes,
Which misted it to music. We must long,
A floating haze of silver subtile song,
    Await love-laden
    Above each maiden
The appointed hour that o'er the hearts of you—
    As vapours into dew

Poems of Francis Thompson

Unweave, whence they were wove,—
Shall turn our loosening musics back to love.”

INSCRIPTION

WHEN the last stir of bubbling melodies
Broke as my chants sank underneath the wave
Of dulcitude, but sank again to rise
Where man's embaying mind those waters lave
(For music hath its Oceanides
Flexuously floating through their parent seas,
And such are these),
I saw a vision—or may it be
The effluence of a dear desired reality?
I saw two spirits high,—
Two spirits, dim within the silver smoke
Which is for ever woke
By snowing lights of fountained Poesy.
Two shapes they were, familiar as love;
They were those souls, whereof
One twines from finest gracious daily things,
Strong, constant, noticeless, as are heart-strings,
The golden cage wherein this song-bird sings;
And the other's sun gives hue to all my flowers,
Which else pale flowers of Tartarus would grow,
Where ghosts watch ghosts of blooms in ghostly bowers;—
For we do know

Sister Songs

The hidden player by his harmonies,
And by my thoughts I know what still hands thrill
the keys.

And to these twain—as from the mind's abysses
All thoughts draw toward the awakening heart's sweet kisses,

With proffer of their wreathen fantasies,—
Even so to these

I saw how many brought their garlands fair,
Whether of song, or simple love, they were,—
Of simple love, that makes best garlands fair.
But one I marked who lingered still behind,
As for such souls no seemly gift had he :

He was not of their strain,
Nor worthy of so bright beings to entertain,
Nor fit compeer for such high company.
Yet was he, surely, born to them in mind,
Their youngest nursling of the spirit's kind.

Last stole this one,
With timid glance, of watching eyes adread,
And dropped his frightened flower when all were gone ;

And where the frail flower fell, it witherèd.
But yet methought those high souls smiled thereon ;
As when a child, upstraining at your knees
Some fond and fancied nothings, says, " I give you these ! "

LOVE IN DIAN'S LAP

I

BEFORE HER PORTRAIT IN YOUTH

As lovers, banished from their lady's face,
And hopeless of her grace,
Fashion a ghostly sweetness in its place,
Fondly adore
Some stealth-won cast attire she wore,
A kerchief, or a glove :
And at the lover's beck
Into the glove there fleets the hand,
Or at impetuous command
Up from the kerchief floats the virgin neck :
So I, in very lowlihead of love,—
Too shyly reverencing
To let one thought's light footfall smooth
Tread near the living, consecrated thing,—
Treasure me thy cast youth.

Love in Dian's Lap

This outworn vesture, tenantless of thee,
    Hath yet my knee,
For that, with show and semblance fair
    Of the past Her
Who once the beautiful, discarded raiment bare,
    It cheateth me.
    As gale to gale drifts breath
    Of blossoms' death,
So, dropping down the years from hour to hour,
    This dead youth's scent is wafted me to-day :
I sit, and from the fragrance dream the flower.
    So, then, she looked (I say) ;
    And so her front sunk down
Heavy beneath the poet's iron crown :
    On her mouth museful-sweet
    (Even as the twin lips meet)
    Did thought and sadness greet :
    Sighs
    In those mournful eyes
    So put on visibilities ;
As viewless ether turns, in deep on deep, to dyes.
    Thus, long ago,
She kept her meditative paces slow
Through maiden meads, with wavèd shadow and gleam
Of locks half-lifted on the winds of dream,
Till Love up-caught her to his chariot's glow.
Yet, voluntary, happier Proserpine !

Poems of Francis Thompson

This drooping flower of youth thou lettest fall
I, faring in the cockshut-light, astray,
    Find on my 'lated way,
And stoop, and gather for memorial,
And lay it on my bosom, and make it mine.
To this, the all of love the stars allow me,
    I dedicate and vow me.
    I reach back through the days
A trothed hand to the dead the last trump shall not raise.
    The water-wraith that cries
From those eternal sorrows of thy pictured eyes
Entwines and draws me down their soundless intricacies.

TO A POET BREAKING SILENCE

Too wearily had we and song
Been left to look and left to long,
Yea, song and we to long and look,
Since thine acquainted feet forsook
The mountain where the Muses hymn
For Sinai and the Seraphim.
Now in both the mountains' shine
Dress thy countenance, twice divine !

Love in Dian's Lap

From Moses and the Muses draw
The Tables of thy double Law !
His rod-born fount and Castaly
Let the one rock bring forth for thee,
Renewing so from either spring
The songs which both thy countries sing :
Or we shall fear lest, heavened thus long,
Thou should'st forget thy native song,
And mar thy mortal melodies
With broken stammer of the skies.

Ah ! let the sweet birds of the Lord
With earth's waters make accord ;
Teach how the crucifix may be
Carven from the laurel-tree,
Fruit of the Hesperides
Burnish take on Eden-trees,
The Muses' sacred grove be wet
With the red dew of Olivet,
And Sappho lay her burning brows
In white Cecilia's lap of snows !

Thy childhood must have felt the stings
Of too divine o'ershadowings ;
Its odorous heart have been a blossom
That in darkness did unbosom,
Those fire-flies of God to invite,
Burning spirits, which by night

Poems of Francis Thompson

Bear upon their laden wing
To such hearts impregnating.
For flowers that night-wings fertilize
Mock down the stars' unsteady eyes,
And with a happy, sleepless glance
Gaze the moon out of countenance.
I think thy girlhood's watchers must
Have took thy folded songs on trust,
And felt them, as one feels the stir
Of still lightnings in the hair,
When conscious hush expects the cloud
To speak the golden secret loud
Which tacit air is privy to ;
Flasked in the grape the wine they knew,
Ere thy poet-mouth was able
For its first young starry babble.
Keep'st thou not yet that subtle grace ?
Yea, in this silent interspace,
God sets His poems in thy face !

The loom which mortal verse affords,
Out of weak and mortal words,
Wovest thou thy singing-weed in,
To a rune of thy far Eden.
Vain are all disguises ! Ah,
Heavenly incognita !
Thy mien bewrayeth through that wrong
The great Uranian House of Song !

Love in Dian's Lap

As the vintages of earth
Taste of the sun that riped their birth,
We know what never cadent Sun
Thy lampèd clusters throbbèd upon,
What plumed feet the winepress trod ;
Thy wine is flavorful of God.
Whatever singing-robe thou wear
Has the Paradisal air ;
And some gold feather it has kept
Shows what Floor it lately swept !

“ MANUS ANIMAM PINXIT ”

LADY who hold'st on me dominion !
Within your spirit's arms I stay me fast
    Against the fell
Immitigate ravening of the gates of hell ;
And claim my right in you, most hardly won,
Of chaste fidelity upon the chaste :
Hold me and hold by me, lest both should fall
(O in high escalade high companion !)
Even in the breach of Heaven's assaulted wall.
Like to a wind-sown sapling grow I from
The clift, Sweet, of your skyward-jetting soul,—
Shook by all gusts that sweep it, overcome

Poems of Francis Thompson

By all its clouds incumbent : O be true
To your soul, dearest, as my life to you !
For if that soil grow sterile, then the whole
Of me must shrivel, from the topmost shoot
Of climbing poesy, and my life, killed through,
Dry down and perish to the foodless root.

Sweet Summer ! unto you this swallow drew,
By secret instincts inappeasable,
    That did direct him well,
Lured from his gelid North which wrought him wrong,
    Wintered of sunning song ;—
By happy instincts inappeasable,
    Ah yes ! that led him well,
Lured to the untried regions and the new
    Climes of auspicious you ;
To twitter there, and in his singing dwell.
    But ah ! if you, my Summer, should grow waste,
    With grieving skies o'ercast,
For such migration my poor wing was strong
But once ; it has no power to fare again
    Forth o'er the heads of men,
Nor other Summers for its sanctuary :
    But from your mind's chilled sky
It needs must drop, and lie with stiffened wings
    Among your soul's forlornest things ;

Love in Dian's Lap

A speck upon your memory, alack !
A dead fly in a dusty window-crack.

O therefore you who are
What words, being to such mysteries
As raiment to the body is,
Should rather hide than tell ;
Chaste and intelligential love :
Whose form is as a grove
Hushed with the cooing of an unseen dove ;
Whose spirit to my touch thrills purer far
Than is the tingling of a silver bell ;
Whose body other ladies well might bear
As soul,—yea, which it profanation were
For all but you to take as fleshly woof,
Being spirit truest proof ;
Whose spirit sure is lineal to that
Which sang Magnificat :
Chastest, since such you are,
Take this curbed spirit of mine,
Which your own eyes invest with light divine,
For lofty love and high auxiliar
In daily exalt emprise
Which outsoars mortal eyes ;
This soul which on your soul is laid,
As maid's breast against breast of maid ;
Beholding how your own I have engraved
On it, and with what purging thoughts have laved

Poems of Francis Thompson

This love of mine from all mortality.
Indeed the copy is a painful one,
                    And with long labour done !
O if you doubt the thing you are, lady,
                    Come then, and look in me ;
Your beauty, Dian, dress and contemplate
Within a pool to Dian consecrate !
Unveil this spirit, lady, when you will,
For unto all but you 'tis veiled still :
Unveil, and fearless gaze there, you alone,
And if you love the image—'tis your own.

A CARRIER-SONG

I

SINCE you have waned from us,
    Fairest of women !
I am a darkened cage
    Song cannot hymn in.
My songs have followed you,
    Like birds the summer ;
Ah ! bring them back to me,
    Swiftly, dear comer !

Love in Dian's Lap

*Seraphim,
Her to hymn,
Might leave their portals ;
And at my feet learn
The harping of mortals !*

II

Where wings to rustle use,
But this poor tarrier—
Searching my spirit's caves—
Find I for carrier.
Ah ! bring them back to me
Swiftly, sweet comer—
Swift, swift, and bring with you
Song's Indian summer !
*Seraphim,
Her to hymn,
Might leave their portals ;
And at my feet learn
The harping of mortals !*

III

Whereso your angel is,
My angel goeth ;
I am left guardianless,
Paradise knoweth !

Poems of Francis Thompson

I have no Heaven left
To weep my wrongs to ;
Heaven, when you went from us,
Went with my songs too.

*Seraphim,
Her to hymn,
Might leave their portals ;
And at my feet learn
The harping of mortals !*

I have no angels left
Now, Sweet, to pray to :
Where you have made your shrine
They are away to.
They have struck Heaven's tent,
And gone to cover you :
Whereso you keep your state
Heaven is pitched over you !

*Seraphim,
Her to hymn,
Might leave their portals,
And at my feet learn
The harping of mortals !*

She that is Heaven's Queen
Her title borrows,

Love in Dian's Lap

For that she pitiful
Beareth our sorrows.
So thou, Regina mæ,
Spes infirmorum ;
With all our grieving crowned
Mater dolorum !
Seraphim,
Her to hymn,
Might leave their portals ;
And at my feet learn
The harping of mortals !

VI

Yet, envious coveter
Of others' grieving !
This lonely longing yet
'Scapeth your reaving.
Cruel ! to take from a
Sinner his Heaven !
Think you with contrite smiles
To be forgiven ?
Seraphim,
Her to hymn,
Might leave their portals ;
And at my feet learn
The harping of mortals !

VII

Penitent ! give me back
Angels, and Heaven ;
Render your stolen self,
And be forgiven !
How frontier Heaven from you ?
For my soul prays, Sweet,
Still to your face in Heaven,
Heaven in your face, Sweet !
*Seraphim,
Her to hymn,
Might leave their portals ;
And at my feet learn
The harping of mortals !*

SCALA JACOBI PORTAQUE EBURNEA

HER soul from earth to Heaven lies,
Like the ladder of the vision,
Whereon go
To and fro,
In ascension and demission,
Star-flecked feet of Paradise.

Love in Dian's Lap

Now she is drawn up from me,
All my angels, wet-eyed, tristful,
    Gaze from great
    Heaven's gate
Like pent children, very wistful,
That below a playmate see.

Dream-dispensing face of hers !
Ivory port which loosed upon me
    Wings, I wist,
    Whose amethyst
Trepidations have forgone me,—
Hesper's filmy traffickers !

GILDED GOLD

THOU dost to rich attire a grace,
To let it deck itself with thee,
And teachest pomp strange cunning ways
To be thought simplicity.
But lilies, stolen from grassy mold,
No more curled state unfold
Translated to a vase of gold ;
In burning throne though they keep still Serenities unthawed and chill.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Therefore, albeit thou'rt stately so,
In statelier state thou us'dst to go.

Though jewels should phosphoric burn
Through those night-waters of thine hair,
A flower from its translucid urn
Poured silver flame more lunar-fair.
These futile trappings but recall
Degenerate worshippers who fall
In purpled kirtle and brocade
To 'parel the white Mother-Maid.
For, as her image stood arrayed
In vests of its self-substance wrought
To measure of the sculptor's thought—
Slurred by those added braveries ;
So for thy spirit did devise
Its Maker seemly garniture,
Of its own essence parcel pure,—
From grave simplicities a dress,
And reticent demurenesses,
And love encinctured with reserve ;
Which the woven vesture should subservc.
For outward robes in their ostents
Should show the soul's habiliments.
Therefore I say,—Thou'rt fair even so,
But better Fair I use to know.

The violet would thy dusk hair deck

Love in Dian's Lap

With graces like thine own unsought.
Ah ! but such place would daze and wreck
Its simple, lowly, rustic thought ;
For so advanced, dear, to thee,
It would unlearn humility !
Yet do not, with an altered look,
In these weak numbers read rebuke ,
Which are but jealous lest too much
God's master-piece thou shouldst retouch.
Where a sweetness is complete,
Add not sweets unto the sweet !
Or, as thou wilt, for others so
In unfamiliar richness go ;
But keep for mine acquainted eyes
The fashions of thy Paradise.

HER PORTRAIT

OH, but the heavenly grammar did I hold
Of that high speech which angels' tongues turn gold !
So should her deathless beauty take no wrong,
Praised in her own great kindred's fit and cognate tongue :
Or if that language yet with us abode
Which Adam in the garden talked with God !

Poems of Francis Thompson

But our untempered speech descends—poor heirs !
Grimy and rough-cast still from Babel's bricklayers :
Curse on the brutish jargon we inherit,
Strong but to damn, not memorize, a spirit !
A cheek, a lip, a limb, a bosom, they Move with light ease in speech of working-day ;
And women we do use to praise even so.
But here the gates we burst, and to the temple go.
Their praise were her dispraise : who dare, who dare,

Adulate the seraphim for their burning hair ?
How, if with them I dared, here should I dare it ?
How praise the woman, who but know the spirit ?
How praise the colour of her eyes, uncaught
While they were coloured with her varying thought ?
How her mouth's shape, who only use to know
What tender shape her speech will fit it to ?
Or her lips' redness, when their joinèd veil
Song's fervid hand has parted till it wore them pale ?

If I would praise her soul (temerarious if !),
All must be mystery and hieroglyph.
Heaven, which not oft is prodigal of its more
To singers, in their song too great before (By which the hierarch of large poesy is Restrained to his one sacred benefice),
Only for her the salutary awe

Love in Dian's Lap

Relaxes and stern canon of its law ;
To her alone concedes pluralities,
In her alone to reconcile agrees
The Muse, the Graces, and the Charities ;
To her, who can the trust so well conduct,
To her it gives the use, to us the usufruct.

What of the dear administratrix then may
I utter, though I spoke her own carved perfect way ?
What of her daily gracious converse known,
Whose heavenly despotism must needs dethrone
And subjugate all sweetness but its own ?
Deep in my heart subsides the infrequent word,
And there dies slowly throbbing like a wounded bird.

What of her silence, that outsweetens speech ?
What of her thoughts, high marks for mine own thoughts to reach ?

Yet (Chaucer's antique sentence so to turn)
Most gladly will she teach, and gladly learn ;
And teaching her, by her enchanting art,
The master threefold learns for all he can impart.

Now all is said, and all being said,—aye me !
There yet remains unsaid the very She.
Nay, to conclude (so to conclude I dare),
If of her virtues you evade the snare,
Then for her faults you'll fall in love with her.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Alas, and I have spoken of her Muse—
Her Muse, that died with her auroral dewes !
Learn, the wise cherubim from harps of gold
Seduce a trepidating music manifold ;
But the superior seraphim do know
None other music but to flame and glow.
So she first lighted on our frosty earth,
A sad musician, of cherubic birth,
Playing to alien ears—which did not prize
The uncomprehended music of the skies—
The exiled airs of her far Paradise.
But soon, from her own harpings taking fire,
In love and light her melodies expire.
Now Heaven affords her, for her silenced hymn,
A double portion of the seraphim.

At the rich odours from her heart that rise,
My soul remembers its lost Paradise,
And antenatal gales blow from Heaven's shores of spice ;
I grow essential all, uncloaking me
From this encumbering virility,
And feel the primal sex of heaven and poetry :
And, parting from her, in me linger on
Vague snatches of Uranian antiphon.

How to the petty prison could she shrink
Of femineity ?—Nay, but I think

Love in Dian's Lap

In a dear courtesy her spirit would
Woman assume, for grace to womanhood.
Or, votaress to the virgin Sanctitude
Of reticent withdrawal's sweet, courted pale,
She took the cloistral flesh, the sexual veil,
Of her sad, aboriginal sisterhood ;
The habit of cloistral flesh which founding Eve indued.

Thus do I know her. But for what men call
Beauty—the loveliness corporeal,
Its most just praise a thing unproper were
To singer or to listener, me or her.
She wears that body but as one indues
A robe, half careless, for it is the use ;
Although her soul and it so fair agree,
We sure may, unattaint of heresy,
Conceit it might the soul's begetter be.
The immortal could we cease to contemplate,
The mortal part suggests its every trait.
God laid His fingers on the ivories
Of her pure members as on smoothèd keys,
And there out-breathed her spirit's harmonies.
I'll speak a little proudly :—I disdain
To count the beauty worth my wish or gain,
Which the dull daily fool can covet or obtain.
I do confess the fairness of the spoil,
But from such rivalry it takes a soil.

Poems of Francis Thompson

For her I'll proudlier speak.—how could it be
That I should praise the gilding on the psaltery?
'Tis not for her to hold that prize a prize,
Or praise much praise, though proudest in its wise,
To which even hopes of merely women rise
Such strife would to the vanquished laurels yield,
Against her suffered to have lost a field.
Herself must with herself be sole compeer,
Unless the people of her distant sphere
Some gold migration send to melodize the year.
But first our hearts must burn in larger guise,
To reformat the uncharitable skies,
And so the deathless plumage to acclimatize :
Since this, their sole congener in our clime,
Droops her sad, ruffled thoughts half the shivering time.

Yet I have felt what terrors may consort
In women's cheeks, the Graces' soft resort,
My hand hath shook at gentle hands' access,
And trembled at the waving of a tress ;
My blood known panic fear, and fled dismayed,
Where ladies' eyes have set their ambuscade.
The rustle of a robe hath been to me
The very rattle of love's musketry ;
Although my heart hath beat the loud advance,
I have recoiled before a challenging glance,
Proved gay alarms where wailike ribbons dance.

Love in Dian's Lap

And from it all, this knowledge have I got,—
The whole that others have, is less than they have not ;
All which makes other women noted fair,
Unnoted would remain and overshadowed in her.

How should I gauge what beauty is her dole,
Who cannot see her countenance for her soul,
As birds see not the casement for the sky ?
And, as 'tis check they prove its presence by,
I know not of her body till I find
My flight debarred the heaven of her mind.
Hers is the face whence all should copied be,
Did God make replicas of such as she ;
Its presence felt by what it does abate,
Because the soul shines through tempered and mitigate :

Where—as a figure labouring at night
Beside the body of a splendid light—
Dark Time works hidden by its luminousness ;
And every line he labours to impress
Turns added beauty, like the veins that run
Athwart a leaf which hangs against the sun.

There regent Melancholy wide controls ;
There Earth- and Heaven-Love play for aureoles ;
There Sweetness out of Sadness breaks at fits,
Like bubbles on dark water, or as flits

Poems of Francis Thompson

A sudden silver fin through its deep infinities ;
There amorous Thought has sucked pale Fancy's breath,
And Tenderness sits looking toward the lands of Death :
There Feeling stills her breathing with her hand,
And Dream from Melancholy part wrests the wand ;
And on this lady's heart, looked you so deep,
Poor Poetry has rocked himself to sleep :
Upon the heavy blossom of her lips
Hangs the bee Musing ; nigh her lids eclipse
Each half-occulted star beneath that lies ;
And in the contemplation of those eyes,
Passionless passion, wild tranquillities.

EPILOGUE TO THE POET'S SITTER

Wherein he excuseth himself for the manner of the Portrait

ALAS ! now wilt thou chide, and say (I deem)
My figured descant hides the simple theme :
Or, in another wise reproving, say
I ill observe thine own high reticent way.
Oh, pardon, that I testify of thee
What thou couldst never speak, nor others be !

Yet (for the book is not more innocent
Of what the gazer's eyes makes so intent),

Love in Dian's Lap

She will but smile, perhaps, that I find my fair
Sufficing scope in such strait theme as her.
" Bird of the sun ! the stars' wild honey-bee !
Is your gold browsing done so thoroughly ?
Or sinks a singed wing to narrow nest in me ? "
(Thus she might say : for not this lowly vein
Out-deprecates her deprecating strain.)
Oh, you mistake, dear lady, quite ; nor know
Ether was strict as you, its loftiness as low !

The heavens do not advance their majesty
Over their marge ; beyond his empery
The ensigns of the wind are not unfurled,
His reign is hooped in by the pale o' the world.
'Tis not the continent, but the contained,
That pleasaunce makes or prison, loose or chained.
Too much alike or little captives me,
For all oppression is captivity.

What groweth to its height demands no higher ;
The limit limits not, but the desire.
Our minds make their own Termini, nor call
The issuing circumscriptions great or small ;
So high constructing Nature lessons to us all :
Who optics gives accommodate to see
Your countenance large as looks the sun to be,
And distant greatness less than near humanity.

We, therefore, with a sure instinctive mind,

Poems of Francis Thompson

An equal spaciousness of bondage find
In confines far or near, of air or our own kind.
Our looks and longings, which affronts the stars,
Most richly bruised against their golden bars,
Delighted captives of their flaming spears,
Find a restraint restrainless which appears
As that is, and so simply natural,
In you ;—the fair detention freedom call,
And overscroll with fancies the loved prison-wall.

Such sweet captivity, and only such,
In you, as in those golden bars, we touch !
Our gazes for sufficing limits know
The firmament above, your face below ;
Our longings are contented with the skies,
Contented with the heaven, and your eyes.
My restless wings, that beat the whole world through,
Flag on the confines of the sun and you ;
And find the human pale remoter of the two.

IN HER PATHS

AND she has trod before me in these ways !
I think that she has left here heavenlier days ;
And I do guess her passage, as the skies
Of holy Paradise
Turn deeply holier,

Love in Dian's Lap

And, looking up with sudden new delight,
One knows a seraph-wing has passed in flight.

The air is purer for her breathing, sure !

And all the fields do wear

The beauty fallen from her ;

The winds do brush me with her robe's allure.

'Tis she has taught the heavens to look sweet,

And they do but repeat

The heaven, heaven, heaven of her face !

The clouds have studied going from her grace !

The pools whose margins had forgot the tread

Of Naiad, disenchanted, fled,

A second time must mourn,

Bereaven and forlorn.

Ah, foolish pools and meads ! You did not see

Essence of old, essential-pure as she.

For this was even that Lady, and none other,

The man in me calls "Love," the child calls

"Mother."

IX

AFTER HER GOING

THE after-even ! Ah, did I walk,

Indeed, in her or even ?

Poems of Francis Thompson

For nothing of me or around
But absent She did leaven,
Felt in my body as its soul,
And in my soul its heaven.

“ Ah me ! my very flesh turns soul,
Essenced,” I sighed, “ with bliss ! ”
And the blackbird held his lutany,
All fragrant-through with bliss ;
And all things stilled were as a maid
Sweet with a single kiss.

For grief of perfect fairness, eve
Could nothing do but smile ;
The time was far too perfect fair,
Being but for a while ;
And ah, in me, too happy grief
Blinded herself with smile !

The sunset at its radiant heart
Had somewhat unconfest :
The bird was loath of speech, its song
Half-refluent on its breast,
And made melodious toyings with
A note or two at best.

And she was gone, my sole, my Fair,
Ah, sole my Fair, was gone !

Love in Dian's Lap

Methinks, throughout the world 'twere right
I had been sad alone ;
And yet, such sweet in all things' heart
And such sweet in my own !

BENEATH A PHOTOGRAPH

PHŒBUS, who taught me art divine,
Here tried his hand where I did mine ;
And his white fingers in this face
Set my Fair's sigh-suggesting grace.
O sweetness past profaning guess,
Grievous with its own exquisiteness !
Vesper-like face, its shadows bright
With meanings of sequestered light ;
Drooped with shamefast sanctities
She purely fears eyes cannot miss,
Yet would blush to know she is.
Ah, who can view with passionless glance
This tear-compelling countenance ?
He has cozened it to tell
Almost its own miracle.
Yet, I all-viewing though he be,
Methinks saw further here than he ;
And, Master gay, I swear I drew
Something the better of the two !

SIGHT AND INSIGHT

Wisdom is easily seen by them that love her, and is found by them that seek her.

To think therefore upon her is perfect understanding.

WISDOM, vi.

THE MISTRESS OF VISION

I

SECRET was the garden ;
Set i' the pathless awe
Where no star its breath can draw.
Life, that is its warden,
Sits behind the fosse of death. Mine eyes saw not,
and I saw.

II

It was a mazeful wonder ;
Thrice three times it was enwalled
With an emerald—
Sealèd so asunder.
All its birds in middle air hung a-dream, their music thrallèd.

Sight and Insight

III

The Lady of fair weeping,
At the garden's core,
Sang a song of sweet and sore
And the after-sleeping ;
In the land of Luthany, and the tracts of Elenore.

IV

With sweet-pangèd singing,
Sang she through a dream-night's day ;
That the bowers might stay,
Birds bate their winging,
Nor the wall of emerald float in wreathèd haze away.

V

The lily kept its gleaming,
In her tears (divine conservers !)
Washèd with sad art ;
And the flowers of dreaming
Palèd not their fervours,
For her blood flowed through their nervures ;
And the roses were most red, for she dipt them in her heart.

VI

There was never moon,
Save the white sufficing woman :
Light most heavenly-human—
Like the unseen form of sound,

Poems of Francis Thompson

Sensed invisibly in tune,—
With a sun-derived stole
Did inaureole
All her lovely body round ;
Lovely her lucid body with that light was inter-strewn.

The sun which lit that garden wholly,
Low and vibrant visible,
Tempered glory woke ;
And it seemed solely
Like a silver thurible
Solemnly swung, slowly,
Fuming clouds of golden fire, for a cloud of incensesmoke.

VIII

But woe's me, and woe's me,
For the secrets of her eyes !
In my visions fearfully
They are ever shown to be
As fringed pools, whereof each lies
Pallid-dark beneath the skies
Of a night that is
But one bleak necropolis.
And her eyes a little tremble, in the wind of her own sighs.

Sight and Insight

IX

Many changes rise on
Their phantasmal mysteries.
They grow to an horizon
Where earth and heaven meet ;
And like a wing that dies on
The vague twilight-verges,
Many a sinking dream doth fleet
Lessening down their secrecies.
And, as dusk with day converges,
Their orbs are troublously
Over-gloomed and over-glowed with hope and fear of things to be.

X

There is a peak on Himalay,
And on the peak undeluged snow,
And on the snow not eagles stray ;
There if your strong feet could go,—
Looking over tow'rd Cathay
From the never-deluged snow—
Farthest ken might not survey
Where the peoples underground dwell whom antique fables know.

XI

East, ah, east of Himalay,
Dwell the nations underground ;

Poems of Francis Thompson

Hiding from the shock of Day,
For the sun's uprising-sound :
Dare not issue from the ground
At the tumults of the Day,
So fearfully the sun doth sound
Clanging up beyond Cathay ;
For the great earthquaking sunrise rolling up beyond Cathay.

XII

Lend me, O lend me
The terrors of that sound,
That its music may attend me,
Wrap my chant in thunders round ;
While I tell the ancient secrets in that Lady's singing found.

XIII

On Ararat there grew a vine,
When Asia from her bathing rose ;
Our first sailor made a twine
Thereof for his prefiguring brows.
Canst divine
Where, upon our dusty earth, of that vine a cluster grows ?

XIV

On Golgotha there grew a thorn
Round the long-figured Brows.

Sight and Insight

Mourn, O mourn !
For the vine have we the spine ? Is this all the Heaven allows ?

xv

On Calvary was shook a spear ;
Press the point into thy heart—
Joy and fear !
All the spines upon the thorn into curling tendrils start.

xvi

O dismay !
I, a wingless mortal, sporting
With the tresses of the sun ?
I, that dare my hand to lay
On the thunder in its snorting ?
Ere begun,
Falls my singed song down the sky, even the old
Icarian way.

xvii

From the fall precipitant
These dim snatches of her chant
Only have remained mine ;—
That from spear and thorn alone
May be grown
For the front of saint or singer any divinizing twine.

Poems of Francis Thompson

XVIII

Her song said that no springing
Paradise but evermore
Hangeth on a singing
That has chords of weeping,
And that sings the after-sleeping
To souls which wake too sore.

“ But woe the singer, woe ! ” she said ; “ beyond the dead his singing-lore,
All its art of sweet and sore,
He learns, in Elenore ! ”

XIX

Where is the land of Luthany,
Where is the tract of Elenore ?
I am bound therefor.

XX

“ Pierce thy heart to find the key ;
With thee take
Only what none else would keep ;
Learn to dream when thou dost wake,
Learn to wake when thou dost sleep ;
Learn to water joy with tears,
Learn from fears to vanquish fears,

Sight and Insight

To hope, for thou dar'st not despair,
Exult, for that thou dar'st not grieve ;
Plough thou the rock until it bear ;
Know, for thou else couldst not believe ;
Lose, that the lost thou may'st receive ;
Die, for none other way canst live.
When earth and heaven lay down their veil,
And that apocalypse turns thee pale ;
When thy seeing blindeth thee
To what thy fellow-mortals see ;
When their sight to thee is sightless ;
Their living, death ; their light, most lightless ;
Search no more—
Pass the gates of Luthany, tread the region Elenore."

XXI

Where is the land of Luthany,
And where the region Elenore ?
I do faint therefor.

XXII

" When to the new eyes of thee
All things by immortal power,
Near or far,
Hiddenly
To each other linkèd are,
That thou canst not stir a flower
Without troubling of a star ;

Poems of Francis Thompson

When thy song is shield and mirror
To the fair snake-curlèd Pain,
Where thou dar'st affront her terror
That on her thou may'st attain
Perséan conquest ; seek no more,
O seek no more !

Pass the gates of Luthany, tread the region Elenore."

XXIII

So sang she, so wept she,
Through a dream-night's day ;
And with her magic singing kept she—
Mystical in music—
That garden of enchanting
In visionary May ;
Swayless for my spirit's haunting,
Thrice-threefold walled with emerald from our mortal mornings grey.

XXIV

And as a necromancer
Raises from the rose-ash
The ghost of the rose ;
My heart so made answer
To her voice's silver plash,—
Stirred in reddening flash,
And from out its mortal ruins the purpureal phantom blows.

Sight and Insight

XXV

Her tears made dulcet fretting,
Her voice had no word,
More than thunder or the bird.
Yet, unforgetting,
The ravished soul her meanings knew.    Mine ears heard not, and I heard.

XXVI

When she shall unwind
All those wiles she wound about me,
Tears shall break from out me,
That I cannot find
Music in the holy poets to my wistful want, I doubt me !

CONTEMPLATION

THIS morning saw I, fled the shower,
The earth reclining in a lull of power :
The heavens, pursuing not their path,
Lay stretched out naked after bath,
Or so it seemed ; field, water, tree, were still,
Nor was there any purpose on the calm-browed hill.

The hill, which sometimes visibly is Wrought with unresting energies,

Poems of Francis Thompson

Looked idly ; from the musing wood,
And every rock, a life renewed
Exhaled like an unconscious thought
When poets, dreaming unperplexed,
Dream that they dream of nought.
Nature one hour appears a thing unsexed,
Or to such serene balance brought
That her twin natures cease their sweet alarms,
And sleep in one another's arms.
The sun with resting pulses seems to brood,
And slacken its command upon my unurged blood.

The river has not any care
Its passionless water to the sea to bear ;
The leaves have brown content ;
The wall to me has freshness like a scent,
And takes half animate the air,
Making one life with its green moss and stain ;
And life with all things seems too perfect blent
For anything of life to be aware.
The very shades on hill, and tree, and plain,
Where they have fallen doze, and where they doze remain.

No hill can idler be than I ;
No stone its inter-particled vibration
Investeth with a stiller lie ;
No heaven with a more urgent rest betrays

Sight and Insight

The eyes that on it gaze.
We are too near akin that thou shouldst cheat
Me, Nature, with thy fair deceit.
In poets floating like a water-flower
Upon the bosom of the glassy hour,
In skies that no man sees to move,
Lurk untumultuous vortices of power,
For joy too native, and for agitation
Too instant, too entire for sense thereof,
Motion like gnats when autumn suns are low,
Perpetual as the prisoned feet of love
On the heart's floors with pained pace that go.
From stones and poets you may know,
Nothing so active is, as that which least seems so.

For he, that conduit running wine of song,
Then to himself does most belong,
When he his mortal house unbars
To the importunate and thronging feet
That round our corporal walls unhceded beat ;
Till, all containing, he exalt
His stature to the stars, or stars
Narrow their heaven to his fleshly vault :
When, like a city under ocean,
To human things he grows a desolation,
And is made a habitation
For the fluctuous universe
To lave with unimpeded motion.

Poems of Francis Thompson

He scarcely frets the atmosphere
With breathing, and his body shares
The immobility of rocks ;
His heart's a drop-well of tranquillity ;
His mind more still is than the limbs of fear,
And yet its unperturbed velocity
The spirit of the simoom mocks.
He round the solemn centre of his soul
Wheels like a dervish, while his being is Streamed with the set of the world's harmonies,
In the long draft of whatsoever sphere
He lists the sweet and clear
Clangour of his high orbit on to roll,
So gracious is his heavenly grace ;
And the bold stars does hear,
Every one in his airy soar,
For evermore
Shout to each other from the peaks of space,
As 'thwart ravines of azure shouts the mountaineer.

“ BY REASON OF THY LAW ”

HERE I make oath—
Although the heart that knows its bitterness
Hear loath,
And credit less—
That he who kens to meet Pain's kisses fierce

Sight and Insight

Which hiss against his tears,
Dread, loss, nor love frustrate,
Nor all iniquity of the froward years
Shall his inurèd wing make idly bate,
Nor of the appointed quarry his staunch sight
To lose observance quite ;
Seal from half-sad and all-elate
Sagacious eyes
Ultimate Paradise ;
Nor shake his certitude of haughty fate.

Pacing the burning shares of many dooms,
I with stern tread do the clear-witting stars
To judgment cite,
If I have borne aright
The proving of their pure-willed ordeal.
From food of all delight
The heavenly Falconer my heart debars,
And tames with fearful glooms
The haggard to His call ;
Yet sometimes comes a hand, sometimes a voice
    withal,
And she sits meek now, and expects the light.

In this Avernian sky,
This sultry and incumbent canopy
Of dull and doomed regret ;
Where on the unseen verges yet, O yet,

Poems of Francis Thompson

At intervals,
Trembles, and falls,
Faint lightning of remembered transient sweet—
Ah, far too sweet
But to be sweet a little, a little sweet, and fleet ;
Leaving this pallid trace,
This loitering and most fitful light, a space,
Still some sad space,
For Grief to see her own poor face :—
Here where I keep my stand
With all o'er-anguished feet,
And no live comfort near on any hand ;
Lo, I proclaim the unavoided term,
When this morass of tears, then drained and firm,
Shall be a land—
Unshaken I affirm—
Where seven-quired psalterings meet ;
And all the gods move with calm hand in hand,
And eyes that know not trouble and the worm.

THE DREAD OF HEIGHT

*If ye were blind, ye should have no sin : but now ye say :
We see : your sin remaineth. JOHN ix. 41.*

NOT the Circean wine
Most perilous is for pain :

Sight and Insight

Grapes of the heavens' star-loaden vine,
Whereto the lofty-placed
Thoughts of fair souls attain,
Tempt with a more retributive delight,
And do disrelish all life's sober taste.
'Tis to have drunk too well
The drink that is divine,
Maketh the kind earth waste,
And breath intolerable.

Ah me !
How shall my mouth content it with mortality ?
Lo, secret music, sweetest music,
From distances of distance drifting its lone flight,
Down the arcane where Night would perish in
    night,
Like a god's loosened locks slips undulously :
Music that is too grievous of the height
For safe and low delight,
Too infinite
For bounded hearts which yet would girth the sea !

So let it be,
Though sweet be great, and though my heart be small :
So let it be,
O music, music, though you wake in me
No joy, no joy at all ;

Poems of Francis Thompson

Although you only wake
Uttermost sadness, measure of delight,
Which else I could not credit to the height,
Did I not know,
That ill is statured to its opposite ;
Did I not know,
And even of sadness so,
Of utter sadness, make
Of extreme sad a rod to mete
The incredible excess of unsensed sweet,
And mystic wall of strange felicity.
So let it be,
Though sweet be great, and though my heart be
small,
And bitter meat
The food of gods for men to eat ;
Yea, John ate daintier, and did tread
Less ways of heat,
Than whom to their wind-carpeted
High banquet-hall,
And golden love-feasts, the fair stars entreat.

But ah ! withal,
Some hold, some stay,
O difficult Joy, I pray,
Some arms of thine,
Not only, only arms of mine !
Lest like a weary girl I fall

Sight and Insight

From clasping love so high,
And lacking thus thine arms, then may
Most hapless I
Turn utterly to love of basest rate ;
For low they fall whose fall is from the sky.
Yea, who me shall secure
But I, of height grown desperate,
Surcease my wing, and my lost fate
Be dashed from pure
To broken writhings in the shameful slime :
Lower than man, for I dreamed higher,
Thrust down, by how much I aspire,
And damned with drink of immortality ?
For such things be,
Yea, and the lowest reach of reeky Hell
Is but made possible
By foreta'en breath of Heaven's austerest clime.

These tidings from the vast to bring
Needeth not doctor nor divine,
Too well, too well
My flesh doth know the heart-perturbing thing ;
That dread theology alone
Is mine,
Most native and my own ;
And ever with victorious toil
When I have made
Of the deific peaks dim escalade,

Poems of Francis Thompson

My soul with anguish and recoil
Doth like a city in an earthquake rock,
As at my feet the abyss is cloven then,
With deeper menace than for other men,
Of my potential cousinship with mire ;
That all my conquered skies do grow a hollow
    mock,
My fearful powers retire,
No longer strong,
Reversing the shook banners of their song.

Ah, for a heart less native to high Heaven,
A hooded eye, for jesses and restraint,
Or for a will accipitrine to pursue !—
The veil of tutelar flesh to simple livers given,
Or those brave-fledging fervours of the Saint,
Whose heavenly falcon-craft doth never taint,
Nor they in sickest time their ample virtue mew.

ORIENT ODE

Lo, in the sanctuaried East,
Day, a dedicated priest
In all his robes pontifical exprest,
Lifteth slowly, lifteth sweetly,
From out its Orient tabernacle drawn,
Yon orbèd sacrament confest

Sight and Insight

Which sprinkles benediction through the dawn ;
And when the grave procession's ceased,
The earth with due illustrious rite
Blessed,—ere the frail fingers featly
Of twilight, violet-cassocked acolyte,
His sacerdotal stoles unvest—
Sets, for high close of the mysterious feast,
The sun in august exposition meetly
Within the flaming monstrance of the West.

O salutaris hostia,
Quæ cæli pandis ostium !
Through breachèd darkness' rampart, a
Divine assaulter, art thou come !
God whom none may live and mark !
Borne within thy radiant ark,
While the Earth, a joyous David,
Dances before thee from the dawn to dark.
The moon, O leave, pale ruined Eve ;
Behold her fair and greater daughter *
Offers to thee her fruitful water,
Which at thy first white Ave shall conceive !
Thy gazes do on simple her
Desirable allures confer ;
What happy comelinesses rise
Beneath thy beautifying eyes !
Who was, indeed, at first a maid

* The earth.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Such as, with sighs, misgives she is not fair,
And secret views herself afraid,
Till flatteries sweet provoke the charms they swear :
Yea, thy gazes, blissful Lover,
Make the beauties they discover !
What dainty guiles and treacheries caught
From artful prompting of love's artless thought
Her lowly loveliness teach her to adorn,
When thy plumes shiver against the conscious gates of morn !

And so the love which is thy dower,
Earth, though her first-frightened breast
Against the exigent boon protest
(For she, poor maid, of her own power
Has nothing in herself, not even love,
But an unwitting void thereof),
Gives back to thee in sanctities of flower ;
And holy odours do her bosom invest,
That sweeter grows for being prest :
Though dear recoil, the tremorous nurse of joy,
From thine embrace still startles coy,
Till Phosphor lead, at thy returning hour,
The laughing captive from the wishing West.

Nor the majestic heavens less
Thy formidable sweets approve,
Thy dreads and thy delights confess,
That do draw, and that remove.

Sight and Insight

Thou as a lion roar'st, O Sun,
Upon thy satellites' vexèd heels ;
Before thy terrible hunt thy planets run ;
Each in his frightened orbit wheels,
Each flies through inassuageable chase,
Since the hunt o' the world begun,
The puissant approaches of thy face,
And yet thy radiant leash he feels.
Since the hunt o' the world begun,
Lashed with terror, leashed with longing,
The mighty course is ever run ;
Pricked with terror, leashed with longing,
Thy rein they love, and thy rebuke they shun.
Since the hunt o' the world began,
With love that trembleth, fear that loveth,
Thou join'st the woman to the man ;
And Life with Death
In obscure nuptials moveth,
Commingling alien yet affined breath.

Thou art the incarnated Light
Whose Sire is aboriginal, and beyond
Death and resurgence of our day and night ;
From him is thy vicegerent wand
With double potency of the black and white.
Giver of Love, and Beauty, and Desire,
The terror, and the loveliness, and purging,
The deathfulness and lifefulness of fire !

Poems of Francis Thompson

Samson's riddling meanings merging
In thy twofold sceptre meet :
Out of thy minatory might,
Burning Lion, burning Lion,
Comes the honey of all sweet,
And out of thee, the eater, comes forth meat.
And though, by thine alternate breath,
Every kiss thou dost inspire
Echoeth
Back from the windy vaultages of death ;
Yet thy clear warranty above
Augurs the wings of death too must Occult reverberations stir of love
Crescent and life incredible ;
That even the kisses of the just
Go down not unresurgent to the dust.
Yea, not a kiss which I have given,
But shall triumph upon my lips in heaven,
Or cling a shameful fungus there in hell.

Know'st thou me not, O Sun ? Yea, well
Thou know'st the ancient miracle,
The children know'st of Zeus and May ;
And still thou teachest them, O splendid Brother,
To incarnate, the antique way,
The truth which is their heritage from their Sire
In sweet disguise of flesh from their sweet Mother.
My fingers thou hast taught to con

Sight and Insight

Thy flame-chorded psalterion,
Till I can translate into mortal wire—
Till I can translate passing well—
The heavenly harping harmony,
Melodious, sealed, inaudible,
Which makes the dulcet psalter of the world's desire.

Thou whisperest in the Moon's white ear,
And she does whisper into mine,—
By night together, I and she—
With her virgin voice divine,
The things I cannot half so sweetly tell
As she can sweetly speak, I sweetly hear.

By her, the Woman, does Earth live, O Lord,
Yet she for Earth, and both in Thee.
Light out of Light !
Resplendent and prevailing Word
Of the Unheard !
Not unto thee, great Image, not to thee
Did the wise heathen bend an idle knee ;
And in an age of faith grown frore
If I too shall adore,
Be it accounted unto me
A bright sciential idolatry !
God has given thee visible thunders
To utter thine apocalypse of wonders ;
And what want I of prophecy,

Poems of Francis Thompson

That at the sounding from thy station
Of thy fragrant trumpet, see
The seals that melt, the open revelation ?
Or who a God-persuading angel needs,
That only heeds
The rhetoric of thy burning deeds ?
Which but to sing, if it may be,
In worship-warranting moiety,
So I would win
In such a song as hath within
A smouldering core of mystery,
Brimmed with nimbler meanings up
Than hasty Gideons in their hands may sup ;—
Lo, my suit pleads
That thou, Isaian coal of fire,
Touch from yon altar my poor mouth's desire,
And the relucient song take for thy sacred meeds.

To thine own shape
Thou round'st the chrysolite of the grape,
Bind'st thy gold lightnings in his veins ;
Thou storest the white garner of the rains.
Destroyer and preserver, thou
Who medicinest sickness, and to health
Art the unthankèd marrow of its wealth ;
To those apparent sovereignties we bow
And bright appurtenances of thy brow !
Thy proper blood dost thou not give,

Sight and Insight

That Earth, the gusty Mænad, drink and dance ?
Art thou not life of them that live ?
Yea, in glad twinkling advent, thou dost dwell
Within our body as a tabernacle !
Thou bittest with thine ordinance
The jaws of Time, and thou dost mete
The unsustainable treading of his feet.
Thou to thy spousal universe
Art Husband, she thy Wife and Church ;
Who in most dusk and vidual curch,
Her Lord being hence,
Keeps her cold sorrows by thy hearse.
The heavens renew their innocence
And morning state
But by thy sacrament communicate ;
Their weeping night the symbol of our prayers,
Our darkened search,
And sinful vigil desolate.
Yea, biune in imploring dumb,
Essential Heavens and corporal Earth await,
The Spirit and the Bride say : Come !
Lo, of thy Magians I the least
Haste with my gold, my incenses and myrrhs,
To thy desired epiphany, from the spiced
Regions and odorous of Song's traded East.
Thou, for the life of all that live
The victim daily born and sacrificed ;
To whom the pinion of this longing verse

Poems of Francis Thompson

Beats but with fire which first thyself did give,
To thee, O Sun—or is't perchance to Christ?

Ay, if men say that on all high heaven's face
The saintly signs I trace
Which round my stolèd altars hold their solemn place,

Amen, amen! For oh, how could it be,—
When I with wingèd feet had run
Through all the windy earth about,
Quested its secret of the sun,
And heard what thing the stars together shout,—
I should not heed thereout
Consenting counsel won:—

“By this, O Singer, know we if thou see.
When men shall say to thee: Lo! Christ is here,
When men shall say to thee: Lo! Christ is there,
Believe them: yea, and this—then art thou seer,
When all thy crying clear
Is but: Lo here! lo there!—ah me, lo everywhere!”

NEW YEAR'S CHIMES

WHAT is the song the stars sing?
(And a million songs are as song of one)
This is the song the stars sing:
(Sweeter song's none)

Sight and Insight

One to set, and many to sing,
    (And a million songs are as song of one)
One to stand, and many to cling,
The many things, and the one Thing,
    The one that runs not, the many that run.

The ever new weaveth the ever old,
    (And a million songs are as song of one)
Ever telling the never told ;
The silver saith, and the said is gold,
    And done ever the never done.

The chase that's chased is the Lord o' the chase,
    (And a million songs are as song of one)
And the pursued cries on the race ;
    And the hounds in leash are the hounds that run.

Hidden stars by the shown stars' sheen ;
    (And a million suns are but as one)
Colours unseen by the colours seen,
And sounds unheard heard sounds between,
    And a night is in the light of the sun.

An ambushade of light in night,
    (And a million secrets are but as one)
And a night is dark in the sun's light,
    And a world in the world man looks upon.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Hidden stars by the shown stars' wings,

(And a million cycles are but as one)

And a world with unapparent strings

Knits the simulant world of things ;

Behold, and vision thereof is none.

The world above in the world below,

(And a million worlds are but as one)

And the One in all ; as the sun's strength so

Strives in all strength, glows in all glow

Of the earth that wits not, and man thereon.

Braced in its own fourfold embrace

(And a million strengths are as strength of one)

And round it all God's arms of grace,

The world, so as the Vision says,

Doth with great lightning-tramples run.

And thunder bruiteth into thunder,

(And a million sounds are as sound of one)

From stellate peak to peak is tossed a voice of wonder,

And the height stoops down to the depths thereunder,

And sun leans forth to his brother-sun.

And the more ample years unfold

(With a million songs as song of one)

A little new of the ever old,

Sight and Insight

A little told of the never told,
Added act of the never done.

Loud the descant, and low the theme,
(A million songs are as song of one)
And the dream of the world is dream in dream,
But the one Is is, or nought could seem ;
And the song runs round to the song begun.

This is the song the stars sing,
(Toned all in time)
Tintinnabulous, tuned to ring
A multitudinous-single thing,
(Rung all in rhyme).

FROM THE NIGHT OF FOREBEING

AN ODE AFTER EASTER

In the chaos of przordination, and night of our fore-beings.—SIR THOMAS BROWNE.

Et lux in tenebris erat, et tenebræ eam non comprehenderunt.—ST. JOHN.

CAST wide the folding doorways of the East,
For now is light increased !
And the wind-besomed chambers of the air,
See they be garnished fair ;

Poems of Francis Thompson

And look the ways exhale some precious odours,
And set ye all about wild-breathing spice,
Most fit for Paradise !
Now is no time for sober gravity,
Season enough has Nature to be wise ;
But now discinct, with raiment glittering free,
Shake she the ringing rafters of the skies
With festal footing and bold joyance sweet,
And let the earth be drunken and carouse !
For lo, into her house
Spring is come home with her world-wandering feet,
And all things are made young with young desires ;
And all for her is light increased
In yellow stars and yellow daffodils,
And East to West, and West to East,
Fling answering welcome-fires,
By dawn and day-fall, on the jocund hills.
And ye, winged minstrels of her fair meinie,
Being newly coated in glad livery,
Upon her steps attend,
And round her treading dance and without end
Reel your shrill lutany.
What popular breath her coming does out-tell
The garrulous leaves among !
What little noises stir and pass
From blade to blade along the voluble grass !
O Nature, never-done
Ungaped-at Pentecostal miracle,

Sight and Insight

We hear thee, each man in his proper tongue !
Break, elemental children, break ye loose
From the strict frosty rule
Of grey-beard Winter's school.
Vault, O young winds, vault in your tricksome courses

Upon the snowy steeds that reinless use
In coerule pampas of the heaven to run ;
Foaled of the white sea-horses,
Washed in the lambent waters of the sun.
Let even the slug-abled snail upon the thorn
Put forth a conscious horn !
Mine elemental co-mates, joy each one ;
And ah, my foster-brethren, seem not sad—
No, seem not sad,
That my strange heart and I should be so little glad.

Suffer me at your leafy feast
To sit apart, a somewhat alien guest,
And watch your mirth,
Unsharing in the liberal laugh of earth ;
Yet with a sympathy
Begot of wholly sad and half-sweet memory—
The little sweetness making grief complete ;
Faint wind of wings from hours that distant beat,
When I, I too,
Was once, O wild companions, as are you,—
Ran with such wilful feet ;

Poems of Francis Thompson

Wraith of a recent day and dead,
Risen wanly overhead,
Frail, strengthless as a noon-belated moon,
Or as the glazing eyes of watery heaven,
When the sick night sinks into deathly swoon.

A higher and a solemn voice
I heard through your gay-hearted noise ;
A solemn meaning and a stiller voice
Sounds to me from far days when I too shall rejoice,
Nor more be with your jollity at strife.
O prophecy
Of things that are, and are not, and shall be !
The great-vanned Angel March
Hath trumpeted
His clangorous " Sleep no more " to all the dead—
Beat his strong vans o'er earth, and air, and sea.
And they have heard ;
Hark to the Jubilate of the bird
For them that found the dying way to life !
And they have heard,
And quicken to the great precursive word ;
Green spray showers lightly down the cascade of the larch ;
The graves are riven,
And the Sun comes with power amid the clouds of heaven !
Before his way

Sight and Insight

Went forth the trumpet of the March :
Before his way, before his way
Dances the pennon of the May !
O Earth, unchilded, widowed Earth, so long
Lifting in patient pine and ivy-tree
Mournful belief and steadfast prophecy,
Behold how all things are made true !
Behold your bridegroom cometh in to you,
Exceeding glad and strong.
Raise up your eyes, O raise your eyes abroad !
No more shall you sit sole and vidual,
Searching, in servile pall,
Upon the hieratic night the star-sealed sense of all :
Rejoice, O barren, and look forth abroad !
Your children gathered back to your embrace
See with a mother's face.
Look up, O mortals, and the portent heed !
In very deed,
Washed with new fire to their irradiant birth,
Reintegrated are the heavens and earth ;
From sky to sod,
The world's unfolded blossom smells of God.

O imagery

Of that which was the first, and is the last !
For, as the dark profound nativity,
God saw the end should be,
When the world's infant horoscope He cast.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Unshackled from the bright Phœbean awe,
In leaf, flower, mould, and tree,
Resolved into dividual liberty,
Most strengthless, unparticipant, inane,
Or suffered the ill peace of lethargy,
Lo, the Earth eased of rule :
Unsummered, granted to her own worst smart
The dear wish of the fool—
Disintegration, merely which man's heart
For freedom understands,
Amid the frog-like errors from the damp
And quaking swamp
Of the low popular levels spawned in all the lands.
But thou, O Earth, dost much disdain
The bondage of thy waste and futile reign,
And sweetly to the great compulsion draw
Of God's alone true-manumitting law,
And Freedom, only which the wise intend,
To work thine innate end.
Over thy vacant counterfeit of death
Broods with soft urgent breath
Love, that is child of Beauty and of Awe :
To intercleavage of sharp warring pain,
As of contending chaos come again,
Thou wak'st, O Earth,
And work'st from change to change and birth to birth
Creation old as hope, and new as sight ;
For meed of toil not vain,

Sight and Insight

Hearing once more the primal fiat toll ;
" Let there be light ! "

And there is light !
Light flagrant, manifest ;
Light to the zenith, light from pole to pole ;
Light from the East that waxeth to the West,
And with its puissant goings-forth
Encroaches on the South and on the North ;
And with its great approaches does prevail
Upon the sullen fastness of the height,
And summoning its levied power
Crescent and confident through the crescent hour,
Goes down with laughter on the subject vale.
Light flagrant, manifest ;
Light to the sentient closeness of the breast,
Light to the secret chambers of the brain !
And thou up-floatest, warm, and newly-bathed,
Earth, through delicious air,
And with thine own apparent beauties swathed,
Wringing the waters from thine arborous hair ;
That all men's hearts, which do behold and see,
Grow weak with their exceeding much desire,
And turn to thee on fire,
Enamoured with their utter wish of thee,
Anadyomene !
What vine-outquicken life all creatures sup,
Feel, for the air within its sapphire cup

Poems of Francis Thompson

How it does leap, and twinkle headily !
Feel, for Earth's bosom pants, and heaves her
    scarfing sea ;
And round and round in bacchanal rout reel the swift spheres intemperably !

My little-worlded self ! the shadows pass
In this thy sister-world, as in a glass,
Of all processions that revolve in thee :
Not only of cyclic Man
Thou here discern'st the plan,
Not only of cyclic Man, but of the cyclic Me.
Not solely of Mortality's great years
The reflex just appears,
But thine own bosom's year, still circling round
In ample and in ampler gyre
Toward the far completion, wherewith crowned,
Love unconsumed shall chant in his own furnace-fire.

How many trampled and deciduous joys
Enrich thy soul for joys deciduous still,
Before the distance shall fulfil
Cyclic unrest with solemn equipoise !
Happiness is the shadow of things past,
Which fools still take for that which is to be !
And not all foolishly :
For all the past, read true, is prophecy,
And all the firsts are hauntings of some Last,

Sight and Insight

And all the springs are flash-lights of one Spring.
Then leaf, and flower, and fall-less fruit
Shall hang together on the unyellowing bough ;
And silence shall be Music mute
For her surcharged heart. Hush thou !
These things are far too sure that thou should'st
dream

Thereof, lest they appear as things that seem.
Shade within shade ! for deeper in the glass
Now other imaged meanings pass ;
And as the man, the poet there is read.
Winter with me, alack !
Winter on every hand I find :
Soul, brain, and pulses dead ;
The mind no further by the warm sense fed,
The soul weak-stirring in the arid mind,
More tearless-weak to flash itself abroad
Than the earth's life beneath the frost-scorched sod.

My lips have drought, and crack,
By laving music long unvisited.
Beneath the austere and macerating rime
Draws back constricted in its icy urns
The genial flame of Earth, and there
With torment and with tension does prepare
The lush disclosures of the vernal time.
All joys draw inward to their icy urns,
Tormented by constraining rime,

Poems of Francis Thompson

And there
With undelight and throe prepare
The bounteous efflux of the vernal time.
Nor less beneath compulsive Law
Rebukèd draw
The numbèd musics back upon my heart ;
Whose yet-triumphant course I know
And prevalent pulses forth shall start,
Like cataracts that with thunderous hoof charge the disbanding snow.
All power is bound
In quickening refusal so ;
And silence is the lair of sound ;
In act its impulse to deliver,
With fluctuance and quiver
The endeavouring thew grows rigid. Strong
From its retracted coil strikes the resilient song.

Giver of spring,
And song, and every young new thing !
Thou only seest in me, so stripped and bare,
The lyric secret waiting to be born,
The patient term allowed
Before it stretch and flutteringly unfold
Its rumbled webs of amethyst-freaked, diaphanous gold.
And what hard task abstracts me from delight,
Filling with hopeless hope and dear despair

Sight and Insight

The still-born day and parchèd fields of night,
That my old way of song, no longer fair,
For lack of serene care,
Is grown a stony and a weed-choked plot,
Thou only know'st aright,
Thou only know'st, for I know not.
How many songs must die that this may live !
And shall this most rash hope and fugitive,
Fulfilled with beauty and with might
In days whose feet are rumorous on the air,
Make me forget to grieve
For songs which might have been, nor ever were ?
Stern the denial, the travail slow,
The struggling wall will scantily grow :
And though with that dread rite of sacrifice
Ordained for during edifice,
How long, how long ago !
Into that wall which will not thrive
I build myself alive,
Ah, who shall tell me will the wall uprise ?
Thou wilt not tell me, who dost only know !
Yet still in mind I keep,
He which observes the wind shall hardly sow,
He which regards the clouds shall hardly reap.
Thine ancient way ! I give,
Nor wit if I receive ;
Risk all, who all would gain : and blindly. Be it so.

Poems of Francis Thompson

“ And blindly,” said I ?—No !
That saying I unsay : the wings
Hear I not in prævenient winnowings
Of coming songs, that lift my hair and stir it ?
What winds with music wet do the sweet storm foreshow !

Utter stagnation
Is the solstitial slumber of the spinit,
The blear and blank negation of all life :
But these sharp questionings mean strife, and strife

Is the negation of negation.
The thing from which I turn my troubled look,
Fearing the gods’ rebuke ;
That perturbation putting glory on,
As is the golden vortex in the West
Over the foundered sun ;
That—but low breathe it, lest the Nemesis
Unchild me, vaunting this—
Is bliss, the hid, hugged, swaddled bliss !
O youngling Joy carest !
That on my now first-mothered breast
Pliest the strange wonder of thine infant lip,
What this aghast surprise of keenest panging,
Wherefrom I blench, and cry thy soft mouth rest ?

Ah hold, withhold, and let the sweet mouth slip !
So, with such pain, recoils the woolly dam,

Sight and Insight

Unused, affrighted, from her yeanling lamb :
I, one with her in cruel fellowship,
Marvel what unmaternal thing I am.

Nature, enough ! Within thy glass
Too many and too stern the shadows pass.
In this delighted season, flaming
For thy resurrection-feast,
Ah, more I think the long ensepulture-cold,
Than stony winter rolled
From the unsealed mouth of the holy East ;
The snowdrop's saintly stoles less heed
Than the snow-cloistered penance of the seed.
'Tis the weak flesh reclaiming
Against the ordinance
Which yet for just the accepting spirit scans.
Earth waits, and patient heaven,
Self-bonded God doth wait
Thrice-promulgated bans
Of His fair nuptial-date.
And power is man's,
With that great word of "Wait,"
To still the sea of tears,
And shake the iron heart of Fate.
In that one word is strong
An else, alas, much-mortal song ;
With sight to pass the frontier of all spheres,
And voice which does my sight such wrong.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Not without fortitude I wait
The dark majestical ensuit
Of destiny, nor peevish rate
Calm-knowledged Fate.
I, that no part have in the time's bragged way,
And its loud bruit ;
I, in this house so rifted, marred,
So ill to live in, hard to leave ;
I, so star-weary, over-warred,
That have no joy in this your day—
Rather foul fume englutting, that of day
Confounds all ray—
But only stand aside and grieve ;
I yet have sight beyond the smoke,
And kiss the gods' feet, though they wreak
Upon me stroke and again stroke ;
And this my seeing is not weak.
The Woman I behold, whose vision seek
All eyes and know not ; t'ward whom climb
The steps o' the world, and beats all wing of rhyme,
And knows not ; 'twixt the sun and moon
Her inexpressible front enstarred
Tempers the wrangling spheres to tune ;
Their divergent harmonies
Concluded in the concord of her eyes,
And vestal dances of her glad regard.
I see, which fretteth with surmise
Much heads grown unsagacious-grey,

Sight and Insight

The slow aim of wise-hearted Time,
Which folded cycles within cycles cloak :
We pass, we pass, we pass ; this does not pass away,
But holds the furrowing earth still harnessed to its yoke.

The stars still write their golden purposes
On heaven's high palimpsest, and no man sees,
Nor any therein Daniel ; I do hear
From the revolving year
A voice which cries :
" All dies ;
Lo, how all dies ! O seer,
And all things too arise :
All dies, and all is born ;
But each resurgent morn, behold, more near the Perfect Morn."

Firm is the man, and set beyond the cast
Of Fortune's game, and the iniquitous hour,
Whose falcon soul sits fast,
And not intends her high sagacious tour
Or ere the quarry sighted ; who looks past
To slow much sweet from little instant sour,
And in the first does always see the last.

Poems of Francis Thompson

ANY SAINT

HIS shoulder did I hold
Too high that I, o'erbold
    Weak one,
    Should lean thereon.

BUT He a little hath Declined His stately path
    And my Feet set more high ;

THAT the slack arm may reach
His shoulder, and faint speech
    Stir
    His unwithering hair.

AND bolder now and bolder
I lean upon that shoulder,
    So dear
    He is and near :

AND with His aurcole
The tresses of my soul
    Are blent
    In wished content.

Sight and Insight

Yea, this too gentle Lover
Hath flattering words to move her
    To pride
By His sweet side.

Ah, Love ! somewhat let be—
Lest my humility
    Grow weak
When thou dost speak.

Rebate Thy tender suit,
Lest to herself impute
    Some worth
Thy bride of earth !

A maid too easily
Conceits herself to be
    Those things
Her lover sings ;

And being straitly wooed,
Believes herself the Good
    And Fair
He seeks in her.

Turn something of Thy look,
And fear me with rebuke,
    That I
May timorously

Poems of Francis Thompson

Take tremors in Thy arms,
And with contrived charms
Allure
A love unsure.

Not to me, not to me,
Builted so flawfully,
O God,
Thy humbling laud !

Not to this man, but Man,—
Universe in a span ;
Point
Of the spheres conjoint ;

In whom eternally
Thou, Light, dost focus Thee !—
Didst pave
The way o' the wave.

Rivet with stars the Heaven,
For causeways to Thy driven Car
In its coming far

Unto him, only him ;
In Thy deific whim
Didst bound
Thy works' great round

Sight and Insight

In this small ring of flesh ;
The sky's gold-knotted mesh
Thy wrist
Did only twist

To take him in that net.—
Man ! swinging-wicket set Between
The Unseen and Seen ;

Lo, God's two worlds immense,
Of spirit and of sense,
Wed
In this narrow bed ;

Yea, and the midge's hymn
Answers the seraphim
Athwart
Thy body's court !

Great arm-fellow of God !
To the ancestral clod
Kin,
And to cherubin ;

Bread predilectedly
O' the worm and Deity !
Hark,
O God's clay-sealed Ark,

Poems of Francis Thompson

To praise that fits thee, clear
To the ear within the ear,
    But dense
To clay-sealed sense.

All the Omnific made
When in a word he said,
    (Mystery !)
He uttered thee ;

Thee His great utterance bore,
O secret metaphor
    Of what
Thou dream'st no jot !

Cosmic metonymy ;
Weak world-unshuttering key ;
    One
Seal of Solomon !

Trope that itself not scans
Its huge significance,
    Which tries
Cherubic eyes !

Primer where the angels all
God's grammar spell in small,
    Nor spell
The highest too well !

Sight and Insight

Point for the great descants
Of starry disputants ;
Equation
Of creation !

Thou meaning, couldst thou see,
Of all which dafteth thee ;
So plain,
It mocks thy pain.

Stone of the Law indeed,
Thine own self couldst thou read ;
Thy bliss
Within thee is.

Compost of Heaven and mire,
Slow foot and swift desire !
Lo,
To have Yes, choose No ;

Gird, and thou shalt unbind ;
Seek not, and thou shalt find ;
To eat,
Deny thy meat ;

And thou shalt be fulfilled
With all sweet things unwilling :
So best
God loves to jest

Poems of Francis Thompson

With children small—a freak
Of heavenly hide-and-seek Fit

For thy wayward wit,

Who art thyself a thing
Of whim and wavering ;
Free

When His wings pen thee ;

Sole fully blest, to feel
God whistle thee at heel ;

Drunk up
As a dew-drop,

When He bends down, sun-wise,
Intemperable eyes ;

Most proud,
When utterly bowed,

To feel thyself and be
His dear nonentity—

Caught
Beyond human thought

In the thunder-spout of Him,
Until thy being dim,

And be Dead deathlessly.

Sight and Insight

Stoop, stoop ; for thou dost fear
The nettle's wrathful spear,
So slight
Art thou of might !

Rise ; for Heaven hath no frown
When thou to thee pluck'st down,
Strong clod !
The neck of God.

ASSUMPTA MARIA

Thou need not make new songs, but say the old.—

COWLEY.

“ *Mortals, that behold a Woman,
Rising 'twixt the Moon and Sun};
Who am I the heavens assume ? and
All am I, and I am one.*

“ Multitudinous ascend I,
Dreadful as a battle arrayed,
For I bear you whither tend I ;
Ye are I : be undismayed !
I, the Ark that for the graven
Tables of the Law was made ;
Man's own heart was one ; one, Heaven ;
Both within my womb were laid.

Poems of Francis Thompson

For there Anteros with Eros,
Heaven with man conjoined was,—
Twin-stone of the Law, Ischyros,
Agios Athanatos.

“I, the flesh-girt Paradises
Gardencred by the Adam new,
Daintied o'er with sweet devices
Which He loveth, for He grew.
I, the boundless strict Savannah
Which God's leaping feet go through ;
I, the heaven whence the Manna,
Weary Israel, slid on you !
He the Anteros and Eros,
I the body, He the Cross ;
He upbeareth me, Ischyros,
Agios Athanatos !

“I am Daniel's mystic Mountain,
Whence the mighty stone was rolled ;
I am the four Rivers' Fountain,
Watering Paradise of old ;
Cloud down-raining the Just One am,
Danae of the Shower of Gold ;
I the Hostel of the Sun am ;
He the Lamb, and I the Fold.
He the Anteros and Eros,
I the body, He the Cross ;

Sight and Insight

He is fast to me, Ischyros,
Agios Athanatos !

“ I, the presence-hall where Angels
Do enwheel their placèd King—
Even my thoughts which, without change else,
Cyclic burn and cyclic sing.
To the hollow of Heaven transplanted,
I a breathing Eden spring,
Where with venom all outpanted
Lies the slimed Curse shrivelling.
For the brazen Serpent clear on
That old fangèd knowledge shone ;
I to Wisdom rise, Ischyron,
Agion Athanaton !

“ Then commanded and spake to me
He who framed all things that be ;
And my Maker entered through me,
In my tent His rest took He.
Lo ! He standeth, Spouse and Brother,
I to Him, and He to me,
Who upraised me where my mother
Fell, beneath the apple-tree.
Risen 'twixt Anteros and Eros,
Blood and Water, Moon and Sun,
He upbears me, He Ischyros,
I bear Him, the Athanaton ! ”

Poems of Francis Thompson

Where is laid the Lord arisen ?
In the light we walk in gloom ;
Though the Sun has burst his prison,
We know not his biding-room.
Tell us where the Lord sojourneth,
For we find an empty tomb.
“ Whence He sprung, there He returneth,
Mystic Sun,—the Virgin’s Womb.”
Hidden Sun, His beams so near us,
Cloud enpillared as He was
From of old, there He, Ischyros,
Waits our search, Athantos.

Who is She, in candid vesture,
Rushing up from out the brine ?
Treading with resilient gesture
Air, and with that Cup divine ?
She in us and we in her are,
Beating Godward : all that pine,
Lo, a wonder and a terror—
The Sun hath blushed the Sea to Wine !
He the Anteros and Eros,
She the Bride and Spirit ; for
Now the days of promise near us,
And the Sea shall be no more.

Open wide thy gates, O Virgin,
That the King may enter thee !

Sight and Insight

At all gates the clangours gurge in,
God's paludament lightens, see !
Camp of Angels ! Well we even
Of this thing may doubtful be,—
If thou art assumed to Heaven,
Or is Heaven assumed to thee !
Consummatum. Christ the promised,
Thy maiden realm is won, O Strong !
Since to such sweet Kingdom comest,
Remember me, poor Thief of Song !

Cadent fails the stars along :—
Mortals, that behold a woman
Rising 'twixt the Moon and Sun ;
Who am I the heavens assume ? an
All am I, and I am one.

THE AFTER WOMAN

DAUGHTER of the ancient Eve,
We know the gifts ye gave—and give.
Who knows the gifts which you shall give,
Daughter of the newer Eve ?
You, if my soul be augur, you
Shall—O what shall you not, Sweet, do ?
The celestial traitress play,
And all mankind to bliss betray ;
With sacrosanct cajoleries

Poems of Francis Thompson

And starry treachery of your eyes,
Tempt us back to Paradise !
Make heavenly trespass ;—ay, press in
Where faint the fledge-foot seraphin,
Blest fool ! Be ensign of our wars,
And shame us all to warriors !
Unbanner your bright locks,—advance
Girl, their gilded puissance,
I' the mystic vaward, and draw on
After the lovely gonfalon
Us to out-folly the excess
Of your sweet foolhardiness ;
To adventure like intense
Assault against Omnipotence !

Give me song, as She is, new,
Earth should turn in time thereto !
New, and new, and thrice so new,
All old sweets, New Sweet, meant you !
Fair, I had a dream of thee,
When my young heart beat prophecy,
And in apparition elate
Thy little breasts knew waxed great,
Sister of the Canticle,
And thee for God grown marriageable.

How my desire desired your day,
That, wheeled in rumour on its way,
Shook me thus with presentience ! Then

Sight and Insight

Eden's lopped tree shall shoot again :
For who Christ's eyes shall miss, with those Eyes for evident nuncios ?
Or who be tardy to His call
In your accents augural ?
Who shall not feel the Heavens hid
Impend, at tremble of your lid,
And divine advent shine avowed
Under that dim and lucid cloud ;
Yea, 'fore the silver apocalypse
Fail, at the unsealing of your lips ?
When to love you is (O Christ's Spouse !)
To love the beauty of His house ;
Then come the Isaian days ; the old
Shall dream ; and our young men behold
Vision—yea, the vision of Thabor mount,
Which none to other shall recount,
Because in all men's hearts shall be
The seeing and the prophecy.
For ended is the Mystery Play,
When Christ is life, and you the way ;
When Egypt's spoils are Israel's right,
And Day fulfils the married arms of Night.
But here my lips are still.
Until
You and the hour shall be revealed,
This song is sung and sung not, and its words are sealed.

GRACE OF THE WAY

“ MY brother ! ” spake she to the sun ;
The kindred kisses of the stars
Were hers ; her feet were set upon
The moon. If slumber solved the bars

Of sense, or sense transpicuous grown
Fulfilled seeing unto sight,
I know not ; nor if 'twas my own
Ingathered self that made her night.

The windy trammel of her dress,
Her blown locks, took my soul in mesh ;
God's breath they spake, with visibleness
That stirred the raiment of her flesh :

And sensible, as her blown locks were,
Beyond the precincts of her form
I felt the woman flow from her—
A calm of intempestuous storm.

I failed against the affluent tide ;
Out of this abject earth of me
I was translated and enskied
Into the heavenly-regioned She.

Sight and Insight

Now of that vision I bereaven

    This knowledge keep, that may not dim :—
Short arm needs man to reach to Heaven,
    So ready is Heaven to stoop to him ;

Which sets, to measure of man's feet,

    No alien Tree for trystring-place ;
And who can read, may read the sweet
    Direction in his Lady's face.

And pass and pass the daily crowd,

    Unwares, occulted Paradise ;
Love the lost plot cries silver-loud,
    Nor any know the tongue he cries.

The light is in the darkness, and

    The darkness doth not comprehend :
God hath no haste ; and God's sons stand
    Yet a day, tarrying for the end.

Dishonoured Rahab still hath hid,

    Yea still, within her house of shame,
The messengers by Jesus bid
    Forerun the coming of His Name.

The Word was flesh, and crucified,

    From the beginning, and blasphemed :

Poems of Francis Thompson

Its profaned raiment men divide,
Damned by what, revered, had redeemed.

Thy Lady, was thy heart not blind,
One hour gave to thy witless trust
The key thou go'st about to find ;
And thou hast dropped it in the dust.

Of her, the Way's one mortal grace,
Own, save thy seeing be all forgot,
That truly, God was in this place,
And thou, unblest, knew'st it not.

But some have eyes, and will not see ;
And some would see, and have not eyes ;
And fail the tryst, yet find the Tree,
And take the lesson for the prize.

RETROSPECT

ALAS, and I have sung
Much song of matters vain,
And a heaven-sweetened tongue
Turned to unprofiting strain
Of vacant things, which though
Even so they be, and throughly so,
It is no boot at all for thee to know,
But babble and false pain.

Sight and Insight

What profit if the sun
Put forth his radiant thews,
And on his circuit run,
Even after my advice, to this and to that use ;
And the true Orient, Christ,
Make not His cloud of thee ?
I have sung vanity,
And nothing well devised.

And though the cry of stars
Give tongue before His way
Goldenly as I say,
And each from wide Saturnus to hot Mars
He calleth by its name,
Lest that its bright feet stray ;
And thou have lore of all,
But to thine own Sun's call
Thy path disorbed hast never wit to tame ;
It profits not withal,
And my rede is but lame.

Only that, 'mid vain vaunt
Of wisdom ignorant,
A little kiss upon the feet of Love
My hasty verse has stayed
Sometimes a space to plant ;
It has not wholly strayed,
Not wholly missed near sweet, fanning proud plumes above.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Therefore I do repent
That with religion vain,
And misconceived pain,
I have my music bent
To waste on bootless things its skiey-gendered rain :
Yet shall a wiser day
Fulfil more heavenly way
And with approved music clear this slip,
I trust in God most sweet.
Meantime the silent lip,
Meantime the climbing feet.

ULTIMA

LOVE'S ALMSMAN PLAINETH HIS FARE

You, Love's mendicancy who never tried,
How little of your almsman me you know !
Your little languid hand in mine you slide,
Like to a child says—" Kiss me and let me go ! "

And night for this is fretted with my tears,
While I :—" How soon this heavenly neck doth tire,
Bending to me from its transtellar spheres ! "

Ah, heart all kneaded out of honey and fire !
Who bound thee to a body nothing worth,
And shamed thee much with an unlovely soul,
That the most strainedest charity of earth
Distasteth soon to render back the whole
Of thine inflamèd sweets and gentillesse ?

Whereat, like an unpastured Titan, thou
Gnaw'st on thyself for famine's bitterness,
And leap'st against thy chain. Sweet Lady, how Little a linking of the hand to you !

Poems of Francis Thompson

Though I should touch yours careless for a year,
Not one blue vein would lie divinelier blue
Upon your fragile temple, to unsphere
The seraphim for kisses ! Not one curve
Of your sad mouth would droop more sad and sweet.
But little food Love's beggars needs must serve,
That eye your plenteous graces from the street.
A hand-clasp I must feed on for a night,
A noon, although the untasted feast you lay,
To mock me, of your beauty. That you might
Be lover for one space, and make essay
What 'tis to pass unsuppered to your couch,
Keep fast from love all day ; and so be taught
The famine which these craving lines avouch !
Ah ! miser of good things that cost thee naught,
How know'st thou poor men's hunger ?—Misery !
When I go doleless and unfed by thee !

A HOLOCAUST

" No man ever attained supreme knowledge, unless his heart had been torn up by the roots."

WHEN I presage the time shall come—yea, now
Perchance is come, when you shall fail from me,

Ultima

Because the mighty spirit, to whom you vow
Faith of kin genius unrebukably,
Scourges my sloth ; and from your side dismissed
Henceforth this sad and most, most lonely soul
Must, marching fatally through pain and mist,
The God-bid levy of its powers enrol ;
When I presage that none shall hear the voice
From the great Mount that clangs my ordained advance,
That sullen envy bade the churlish choice
Yourself shall say, and turn your altered glance ;—
O God ! Thou knowest if this heart of flesh
Quivers like broken entrails, when the wheel
Rolleth some dog in middle street, or fresh
Fruit when ye tear it bleeding from the peel ;
If my soul cries the uncomprehended cry
When the red agony oozed on Oliver.
Yet not for this, a caitiff, falter I,
Beloved whom I must lose, nor thence regret
The doubly-vouched and twin allegiance owed
To you in Heaven, and Heaven in you, Lady.
How could you hope, loose dealer with my God,
That I should keep for you my fealty ?
For still 'tis thus :—because I am so true,
My Fair, to Heaven, I am so true to you !

MY LADY THE TYRANNESS

ME since your fair ambition bows
Feodary to those gracious brows,
Is nothing mine will not confess
Your sovran sweet rapaciousness ?
Though use to the white yoke inures,
Half-petulant is
Your loving rebel for somewhat his,
Not yours, my love, not yours !

Behold my skies, which make with me
One passionate tranquillity !
Wrap thyself in them as a robe,
She shares them not ; their azures probe,
No countering wings thy flight endures.
Nay, they do stole
Me like an aura of her soul.
I yield them, love, for yours !

But mine these hills and fields, which put
Not on the sanctity of her foot.
Far off, my dear, far off the sweet
Grave pianissimo of your feet !
My earth, perchance, your sway abjures ?—
Your absence broods
O'er all, a subtler presence. Woods,
Fields, hills, all yours, all yours !

Ultima

Nay then, I said, I have my thought,
Which never woman's reaching raught ;
Being strong beyond a woman's might,
And high beyond a woman's height,
Shaped to my shape in all contours.—
I looked, and knew
No thought but you were garden to.
All yours, my love, all yours !

Meseemeth still, I have my life ;
All-clement Her its resolute strife
Evades ; contained, relinquishing
Her mitigating eyes ; a thing
Which the whole girth of God secures
Ah, fool ! pause ! pause !
I had no life, until it was
All yours, my love, all yours !

Yet, stern possession ! I have my death,
Sole yielding up of my sole breath,
Which all within myself I die,
All in myself must cry the cry
Which the deaf body's wall immures.—
Thought fashioneth
My death without her.—Ah, even death
All yours, my love, all yours !

Poems of Francis Thompson

Death, then, be hers. I have my heaven,
For which no arm of hers has striven ;
Which solitary I must choose,
And solitary win or lose.—
Ah, but not heaven my own endures !
I must perforce
Taste you, my stream, in God your source,—
So steep my heaven in yours.

At last I said—I have my God,
Who doth desire me, though a clod,
And from His liberal Heaven shall He
Bar in mine arms His privacy.
Himself for mine Himself assures.—
None shall deny
God to be mine, but He and I
All yours, my love, all yours !

I have no fear at all lest I
Without her draw felicity.
God for His Heaven will not forego
Her whom I found such heaven below,
And she will train Him to her lures.
Nought, lady, I love
In you but more is loved above ;
What made me, makes Him, yours.

“ I, thy sought own, am I forgot ? ”
Ha, thou ?—thou liest, I seek thee not.

Ultima

Why what, thou painted parrot, Fame,
What have I taught thee but her name ?
Hear, thou slave Fame, while Time endures,
I give her thee ;
Page her triumphal name !—Lady,
Take her, the thrall is yours.

UNTO THIS LAST

A BOY's young fancy taketh love
Most simply, with the rind thereof ;
A boy's young fancy tasteth more
The rind, than the deific core.
Ah, Sweet ! to cast away the slips
Of unessential rind, and lips
Fix on the immortal core, is well ;
But heard'st thou ever any tell
Of such a fool would take for food
Aspect and scent, however good,
Of sweetest core Love's orchards grow ?
Should such a phantast please him so,
Love where Love's reverent self denies
Love to feed, but with his eyes,
All the savour, all the touch,
Another's—was there ever such ?
Such were fool, if fool there be ;
Such fool was I, and was for thee !

Poems of Francis Thompson

But if the touch and savour too
Of this fruit—say, Sweet, of you—
You unto another give
For sacrosanct prerogative,
Yet even scent and aspect were
Some elected Second's share ;
And one, gone mad, should rest content
With memory of show and scent ;
Would not thyself vow, if there sigh
Such a fool—say, Sweet, as I—
Treble frenzy it must be
Still to love, and to love thee ?

Yet had I torn (man knoweth not,
Nor scarce the unweeping angels wot
Of such dread task the lightest part)
Her fingers from about my heart.
Heart, did we not think that she
Had surceased her tyranny ?
Heart, we bounded, and were free !
O sacrilegious freedom !—Till
She came, and taught my apostate will
The winnowed sweet mirth cannot guess
And tear-fined peace of hopelessness ;
Looked, spake, simply touched, and went.
Now old pain is fresh content,
Proved content is unproved pain,
Pangs fore-tempted, which in vain

Ultima

I, faithless, have denied, now bud
To untempted fragrance and the mood
Of contrite heavenliness ; all days
Joy affrights me in my ways ;
Extremities of old delight
Afflict me with new exquisite
Virgin piercings of surprise,—
Stung by those wild brown bees, her eyes !

ULTIMUM

Now in these last spent drops, slow, slower shed,
Love dies, Love dies, Love dies—ah, Love is dead !
Sad Love in life, sore Love in agony,
Pale Love in death ; while all his offspring songs,
Like children, versed not in death's chilly wrongs,
About him flit, frightened to see him lie
So still, who did not know that Love could die.
One lifts his wing, where dulls the vermeil all
Like clotting blood, and shrinks to find it cold,
And when she sees its lapse and nerveless fall
Clasps her fans, while her sobs ooze through the webbèd gold.

Thereat all weep together, and their tears
Make lights like shivered moonlight on long waters.
Have peace, O piteous daughters !
He shall not wake more through the mortal years,

Poems of Francis Thompson

Nor comfort come to my soul widowed,
Nor breath to your wild wings ; for Love is dead !
I slew, that moan for him ; he lifted me
Above myself, and that I might not be Less than myself, need was that he should die ;
Since Love that first did wing, now clogged me from the sky.

Yet lofty Love being dead thus passeth base—
There is a soul of nobleness which stays,
The spectre of the rose : be comforted,
Songs, for the dust that dims his sacred head !
The days draw on too dark for Song or Love ;
O peace, my songs, nor stir ye any wing !
For lo, the thunder hushing all the grove,
And did Love live, not even Love could sing.

And, Lady, thus I dare to say,
Not all with you is passed away !
Beyond your star, still, still the stars are bright ;
Beyond your highness, still I follow height ;
Sole I go forth, yet still to my sad view,
Beyond your trueness, Lady, Truth stands true.
This wisdom sings my song with last firm breath,
Caught from the twisted lore of Love and Death,
The strange inwoven harmony that wakes
From Pallas' straying locks twined with her ægissnakes :

“ On him the unpetitioned heavens descend,

Ultima

Who heaven on earth proposes not for end ;
The perilous and celestial excess
Taking with peace, lacking with thankfulness.
Bliss in extreme befits thee not, until
Thou'rt not extreme in bliss ; be equal still :
Sweets to be granted think thyself unmeet
Till thou have learned to hold sweet not too sweet."
This thing not far is he from wise in art
Who teacheth ; nor who doth, from wise in heart.

A NARROW VESSEL

BEING A LITTLE DRAMATIC SEQUENCE ON THE ASPECT OF PRIMITIVE GIRL-NATURE TOWARDS A LOVE BEYOND ITS CAPACITIES

A GIRL'S SIN

I.—IN HER EYES

CROSS child ! red, and frowning so ?

“ I, the day just over,
Gave a lock of hair to—no !
How dare you say, my lover ? ”

He asked you ?—Let me understand ;

Come, child, let me sound it !
“ Of course, he would have asked it, and—
And so—somehow—he—found it.

“ He told it out with great loud eyes—

Men have such little wit !
His sin I ever will chastise
Because I gave him it.

“ Shameless in me the gift, alas !

In him his open bliss :
But for the privilege he has
A thousand he shall miss !

A Narrow Vessel

“ His eyes, where once I dreadless laughed,
Call up a burning blot :
I hate him, for his shameful craft
That asked by asking not ! ”

Luckless boy ! and all for hair
He never asked, you said ?
“ Not just—but then he gazed—I swear
He gazed it from my head !

“ His silence on my cheek like breath
I felt in subtle way ;
More sweet than aught another saith
Was what he did not say.

“ He'll think me vanquished, for this lapse,
Who should be above him ;
Perhaps he'll think me light ; perhaps—
Perhaps he'll think I—love him !

“ Are his eyes conscious and elate,
I hate him that I blush ;
Or are they innocent, still I hate—
They mean a thing's to hush.

“ Before he naught amiss could do,
Now all things show amiss ;
'Twas all my fault, I know that true,
But all my fault was his.

Poems of Francis Thompson

" I hate him for his mute distress,
'Tis insult he should care !
Because my heart's all humbleness,
All pride is in my air.

" With him, each favour that I do
Is bold suit's hallowing text ;
Each gift a bastion levelled, to
The next one and the next.

" Each wish whose grant may him befall
Is clogged by those withstood ;
He trembles, hoping one means all,
And I, lest perhaps it should.

" Behind me piecemeal gifts I cast,
My fleeing self to save ;
And that's the thing must go at last,
For that's the thing he'd have.

" My lock the enforced steel did grate
To cut ; its root-thrills came Down to my bosom. It might sate
His lust for my poor shame !

" His sifted dainty this should be
For a score ambrosial years !
But his too much humility
Alarums me with fears.

A Narrow Vessel

“ My gracious grace a breach he counts
For graceless escalade ;
And, though he's silent ere he mounts,
My watch is not betrayed.

“ My heart hides from my soul he's sweet :
Ah dread, if he divine !
One touch, I might fall at his feet,
And he might rise from mine.

“ To hear him praise my eyes' brown gleams
Was native, safe delight ;
But now it usurpation seems,
Because I've given him right.

“ Before I'd have him not remove ;
Now would not have him near ;
With sacrifice I called on Love,
And the apparition's Fear.”

Foolish to give it !—“ 'Twas my whim,
When he might parted be,
To think that I should stay by him
In a little piece of me.

“ He always said my hair was soft—
What touches he will steal !
Each touch and look (and he'll look oft)
I almost thought I'd feel.

Poems of Francis Thompson

“ And then, when first he saw the hair,
To think his dear amazement !
As if he wished from skies a star,
And found it in his casement.

“ He’d kiss the lock—and I had toyed
With dreamed delight of this :
But ah, in proof, delight was void—
I could not see his kiss ! ”

So, fond one, half this agony
Were spared, which my hand hushes,
Could you have played, Sweet, the sweet spy,
And blushed not for your blushes !

A GIRL’S SIN

II.—IN HIS EYES

CAN I forget her cruelty
Who, brown miracle, gave you me ?
Or with unmoisted eyes think on
The proud surrender overgone
(Lowlihead in haughty dress)
Of the tender tyranness ?
And ere thou for my joy was given,
How rough the road to that blest heaven !

A Narrow Vessel

With what pangs I fore-expiated
Thy cold outlawry from her head ;
How was I trampled and brought low,
Because her virgin neck was so ;
How thrall'd beneath the jealous state
She stood at point to abdicate ;
How sacrificed, before to me
She sacrificed her pride and thee ;
How did she, struggling to abase
Herself to do me strange, sweet grace,
Enforce unwitting me to share
Her throes and abjectness with her ;
Thence heightening that hour when her lover
Her grace, with trembling, should discover,
And in adoring trouble be
Humbled at her humility !
And with what pitilessness was I
After slain, to pacify
The uneasy manes of her shame,
Her haunting blushes !—Mine the blame :
What fair injustice did I rue
For what I—did not tempt her to !
Nor aught the judging maid might win
Me to assoil from her sweet sin.
But nought were extreme punishment
For that beyond-divine content,
When my with-thee-first-giddied eyes
Stooped ere their due on Paradise !

A Narrow Vessel

Carved from a fair white silence.

Lo, he stands
Within us—are we not one now, one, one roof,
His roof, and the partition of weak flesh
Gone down before him, and no more, for ever?—
Stands like a bird new-lit, and as he lit,
Poised in our quiet being; only, only
Within our shaken hearts the air of passion,
Cleft by his sudden coming, eddies still
And whirs round his enchanted movelessness.

A film of trance between two stirrings! Lo,
It bursts; yet dream's snapped links cling round
the limbs
Of waking: like a running evening stream
Which no man hears, or sees, or knows to run,
(Glazed with dim quiet,) save that there the moon
Is shattered to a creamy flicker of flame,
Our eyes' sweet trouble were hid, save that the love
Trembles a little on their impassioned calms.

THE WAY OF A MAID

THE lover whose soul shaken is
In some decuman billow of bliss,
Who feels his gradual-wading feet
Sink in some sudden hollow of sweet,

Poems of Francis Thompson

And 'mid love's used converse comes
Sharp on a mood which all joy sums,
An instant's fine compendium of
The liberal-leaved writ of love—
His abashed pulses beating thick
At the exigent joy and quick,
Is dumb'd, by aiming utterance great
Up to the miracle of his fate.

The wise girl, such Icarian fall
Saved by her confidence that she 's small,—
As what no kindred word will fit
Is uttered best by opposite,
Love in the tongue of hate exprest,
And deepest anguish in a jest,—
Feeling the infinite must be Best said by triviality,
Speaks, where expression bates its wings,
Just happy, alien, little things ;
What of all words is in excess
Implies in a sweet nothingness ;
With dailiest babble shows her sense
That full speech were full impotence ;
And, while she feels the heavens lie bare,
She only talks about her hair.

A Narrow Vessel

BEGINNING OF END

SHE was aweary of the hovering
Of Love's incessant and tumultuous wing ;
Her lover's tokens she would answer not—
'Twere well she should be strange with him somewhat :

A pretty babe, this Love,—but fie on it,
That would not suffer her lay it down a whit !
Appointed tryst defiantly she balked,
And with her lightest comrade lightly walked,
Who scared the chidden Love to hide apart,
And peep from some unnoticed corner of her heart.
She thought not of her lover, deem it not
(There yonder, in the hollow, that's his cot),
But she forgot not that he was forgot.
She saw him at his gate, yet stilled her tongue—
So weak she felt her, that she would feel strong,
And she must punish him for doing him wrong :
Passed, unoblivious of oblivion still ;
And, if she turned upon the brow o' the hill,
It was so openly, so lightly done,
You saw she thought he was not thought upon.
He through the gate went back in bitterness ;
She that night woke and stirred, with no distress,
Glad of her doing,—sedulous to be glad,
Lest perhaps her foolish heart suspect that it was sad.

PENELOPE

LOVE, like a wind, shook wide your blossomy eyes ;
You trembled, and your breath came sobbing-wise,
For that you loved me.

You were so kind, so sweet, none could withhold
To adore, but that you were so strange, so cold,
For that you loved me.

Like to a box of spikenard did you break
Your heart about my feet. What words you spake !
For that you loved me.

Life fell to dust without me ; so you tried
All carefullest ways to drive me from your side,
For that you loved me.

You gave yourself as children give, that weep
And snatch back, with—" I meant you not to keep ! "
For that you loved me.

I am no woman, girl, nor ever knew
That love could teach all ways that hate could do
To her that loved me.

A Narrow Vessel

Have less of love, or less of woman in
Your love, or loss may even from this begin—
That you so love me.

For, wild Penelope, the web you wove
You still unweave, unloving all your love.
Is this to love me,

Or what rights have I that scorn could deny?
Even of your love, alas, poor Love must die,
If so you love me !

THE END OF IT

SHE did not love to love, but hated him
For making her to love ; and so her whim
From passion taught misprision to begin.
And all this sin
Was because love to cast out had no skill
Self, which was regent still.
Her own self-will made void her own self's will.

EPILOGUE

If I have studied here in part
A tale as old as maiden's heart,
'Tis that I do see herein
Shadow of more piteous sin.

Poems of Francis Thompson

She, that but giving part, not whole,
Took even the part back, is the Soul :
And that so disdained Lover—
Best unthought, since Love is over.

Love to invite, desire, and fear,
And Love's exactions cost too dear
Count for Love's possession,—ah,
Thy way, misera Anima !

To give the pledge, and yet be pined
That a pledge should have force to bind,
This, O Soul, too often still
Is the recreance of thy will !

Out of Love's arms to make fond chain,
And, because struggle bringeth pain,
Hate Love for Love's sweet constraint,
Is the way of Souls that faint.

Such a Soul, for saddest end,
Finds Love the foe in Love the friend ;
And—ah, grief incredible !—
Treads the way of Heaven, to Hell.

ODES

ODE TO THE SETTING SUN

PRELUDE

THE wailful sweetness of the violin
Floats down the hushèd waters of the wind,
The heart-strings of the throbbing harp begin
To long in aching music. Spirit-pined,

In wafts that poignant sweetness drifts, until
The wounded soul ooze sadness. The red sun,
A bubble of fire, drops slowly toward the hill,
While one bird prattles that the day is done.

O setting Sun, that as in reverent days
Sinkest in music to thy smoothèd sleep,
Discrowned of homage, though yet crowned with rays,
Hymned not at harvest more, though reapers reap:

Poems of Francis Thompson

For thee this music wakes not. O deceived,
If thou hear in these thoughtless harmonies
A pious phantom of adorings reaved,
And echo of fair ancient flatteries !

Yet, in this field where the Cross planted reigns,
I know not what strange passion bows my head
To thee, whose great command upon my veins
Proves thee a god for me not dead, not dead !

For worship it is too incredulous,
For doubt—oh, too believing-passionate !
What wild divinity makes my heart thus
A fount of most baptismal tears ?—Thy straight

Long beam lies steady on the Cross. Ah me !
What secret would thy radiant finger show ?
Of thy bright mastership is this the key ?
Is this thy secret, then ? And is it woe ?

Fling from thine ear the burning curls, and hark
A song thou hast not heard in Northern day ;
For Rome too daring, and for Greece too dark,
Sweet with wild wings that pass, that pass away !

Odes

ODE

ALPHA and Omega, sadness and mirth,
The springing music, and its wasting breath—
The fairest things in life are Death and Birth,
And of these two the fairer thing is Death.
Mystical twins of Time inseparable,
The younger hath the holier array,
And hath the awfuller sway :
It is the falling star that trails the light,
It is the breaking wave that hath the might,
The passing shower that rainbows maniple.
Is it not so, O thou down-stricken Day,
That draw'st thy splendours round thee in thy fall ?
High was thine Eastern pomp inaugural ;
But thou dost set in statelier pageantry,
Lauded with tumults of a firmament :
Thy visible music-blasts make deaf the sky,
Thy cymbals clang to fire the Occident,
Thou dost thy dying so triumphally :
I see the crimson blaring of thy shawms !
Why do those lucent palms
Strew thy feet's failing thicklier than their might,
Who dost but hood thy glorious eyes with night,
And vex the heels of all the yesterdays ?
Lo ! this loud, lackeying praise

Poems of Francis Thompson

Will stay behind to greet the usurping moon,
When they have cloud-barred over thee the West.
Oh, shake the bright dust from thy parting shoon !
The earth not pæans thee, nor serves thy hest ;
Be godded not by Heaven ! avert thy face,
And leave to blank disgrace
The oblivious world ! unsceptre thee of state and place !

Ha ! but bethink thee what thou gazedst on,
Ere yet the snake Decay had venom'd tooth ;
The name thou bar'st in those vast seasons gone—
Candid Hyperion,
Clad in the light of thine immortal youth !
Ere Dionysus bled thy vines,
Or Artemis drave her clamours through the wood,
Thou saw'st how once against Olympus' height
The brawny Titans stood,
And shook the gods' world 'bout their ears, and how
Enceladus (whom Etna cumpers now)
Shouldered me Pelion with its swinging pines,
The river unrecked, that did its broken flood
Spurt on his back : before the mountainous shock
The rankèd gods dislock,
Scared to their skies ; wide o'er rout-trampled night

Odes

Flew spurned the pebbled stars : those splendours
then

Had tempested on earth, star upon star
Mounded in ruin, if a longer war
Had quaked Olympus and cold-fearing men.

Then did the ample marge
And circuit of thy targe
Sullenly redden all the vaward fight,
Above the blustering clash
Wheeled thy swung falchion's flash,
And hewed their forces into splintered flight.
Yet ere Olympus thou wast, and a god !

Though we deny thy nod,
We cannot spoil thee of thy divinity.
What know we elder than thee ?
When thou didst, bursting from the great void's husk,

Leap like a lion on the throat o' the dusk ;

When the angels rose-chapleted
Sang each to other,
The vaulted blaze overhead
Of their vast pinions spread,
Hailing thee brother ;
How chaos rolled back from the wonder,
And the First Morn knelt down to thy visage of thunder !

Thou didst draw to thy side
Thy young Auroral bride,

Poems of Francis Thompson

And lift her veil of night and mystery ;
Tellus with baby hands
Shook off her swaddling-bands,
And from the unswathed vapours laughed to thee.

Thou twi-form deity, nurse at once and sire !
Thou genitor that all things nourishest !
The earth was suckled at thy shining breast,
And in her veins is quick thy milky fire.
Who scarfed her with the morning ? and who set
Upon her brow the day-fall's carcanet ?
Who queened her front with the enronoured moon ?
Who dug night's jewels from their vaulty mine
To dower her, past an eastern wizard's dreams,
When, hovering on him through his haschish-
swoon,
All the rained gems of the old Tartarian line
Shiver in lustrous throbbings of tinged flame ?
Whereof a moiety in the Paolis' seams
Statelily builded their Venetian name.
Thou hast enwoofed her
An empress of the air,
And all her births are propertied by thee :
Her teeming centuries
Drew being from thine eyes :
Thou fatt'st the marrow of all quality.

Odes

Who lit the furnace of the mammoth's heart ?
Who shagged him like Pilatus' ribbèd flanks ?
Who raised the columned ranks
Of that old pre-diluvian forestry,
Which like a continent torn oppressed the sea,
When the ancient heavens did in rains depart,
While the high-dancèd whirls
Of the tossed scud made hiss thy drenchèd curls ?
Thou rear'dst the enormous brood ;
Who hast with life imbued
The lion maned in tawny majesty,
The tiger velvet-barred,
The stealthy-stepping pard,
And the lithe panther's flexuous symmetry.

How came the entombèd tree a light-bearer,
Though sunk in lightless lair ?
Friend of the forgers of earth,
Mate of the earthquake and thunders volcanic,
Clasped in the arms of the forces Titanic
Which rock like a cradle the girth
Of the ether-hung world ;
Swart son of the swarthy mine,
When flame on the breath of his nostrils feeds
How is his countenance half-divine,
Like thee in thy sanguine weeds ?

Poems of Francis Thompson

Thou gavest him his light,
Though sepultured in night
Beneath the dead bones of a perished world ;
Over his prostrate form
Though cold, and heat, and storm,
The mountainous wrack of a creation hurled.

Who made the splendid rose
Saturate with purple glows ;
Cupped to the marge with beauty ; a perfume-press
Whence the wind vintages
Gushes of warmed fragrance richer far
Than all the flavorful ooze of Cyprus' vats ?
Lo, in yon gale which waves her green cymar,
With dusky cheeks burnt red
She sways her heavy head,
Drunk with the must of her own odorousness ;
While in a moted trouble the vexed gnats
Maze, and vibrate, and tease the noontide hush.
Who girt dissolved lightnings in the grape ?
Summered the opal with an Irised flush ?
Is it not thou that dost the tulip drape,
And huest the daffodilly,
Yet who hast snowed the lily,
And her frail sister, whom the waters name,
Dost vestal-vesture 'mid the blaze of June,
Cold as the new-sprung girlhood of the moon
Ere Autumn's kiss sultry her cheek with flame ?

Odes

Thou sway'st thy sceptred beam
O'er all delight and dream,
Beauty is beautiful but in thy glance :
And like a jocund maid
In garland-flowers arrayed,
Before thy ark Earth keeps her sacred dance.

And now, O shaken from thine antique throne,
And sunken from thy coerule empery,
Now that the red glare of thy fall is blown
In smoke and flame about the windy sky,
Where are the wailing voices that should meet
From hill, stream, grove, and all of mortal shape
Who tread thy gifts, in vineyards as stray feet
Pulp the globed weight of juiced Iberia's grape ?
Where is the threne o' the sea ?
And why not dirges thee
The wind, that sings to himself as he makes stride
Lonely and terrible on the Andéan height ?
Where is the Naiad 'mid her sworded sedge ?
The Nymph wan-glimmering by her wan fount's verge ?
The Dryad at timid gaze by the wood-side ?
The Oread jutting light
On one up-strained sole from the rock-ledge ?
The Nereid tip-toe on the scud o' the surge,
With whistling tresses dank athwart her face,
And all her figure poised in lithe Circean grace ?

Poems of Francis Thompson

Why withers their lament ?
Their tresses tear-besprent,
Have they sighed hence with trailing garment-hem ?
O sweet, O sad, O fair,
I catch your flying hair,
Draw your eyes down to me, and dream on them !

A space, and they fleet from me. Must ye fade—
O old, essential candours, ye who made
The earth a living and a radiant thing—
And leave her corpse in our strained, cheated
arms ?

Lo ever thus, when Song with chorded charms
Draws from full death his lost Eurydice,
Lo ever thus, even at consummating,
Even in the swooning minute that claims her his,
Even as he trembles to the impassioned kiss
Of incarnate Beauty, his control
Clasps the cold body, and forgoes the soul !

Whatso looks lovelily
Is but the rainbow on life's weeping rain.
Why have we longings of immortal pain,
And all we long for mortal ? Woe is me,
And all our chants but chaplet some decay,
As mine this vanishing—nay, vanished Day.
The low sky-line dusks to a laden hue,
No rift disturbs the heavy shade and chill,

Odes

Save one, where the charred firmament lets through
The scorching dazzle of Heaven ; 'gainst which the hill,

Out-flattened sombrely,
Stands black as life against eternity.

Against eternity ?
A rifting light in me
Burns through the leaden broodings of the mind :
O blessed Sun, thy state
Uprisen or derogate
Dafts me no more with doubt ; I seek and find.

If with exultant tread
Thou foot the Eastern sea,
Or like a golden bee
Sting the West to angry red,
Thou dost image, thou dost follow
That King-Maker of Creation,
Who, ere Hellas hailed Apollo,
Gave thee, angel-god, thy station ;
Thou art of Him a type memorial.
Like Him thou hang'st in dreadful pomp of blood
Upon thy Western rood ;
And His stained brow did veil like thine to night,
Yet lift once more Its light,
And, risen, again departed from our ball,
But when It set on earth arose in Heaven.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Thus hath He unto death His beauty given :
And so of all which form inheriteth

    The fall doth pass the rise in worth ;
For birth hath in itself the germ of death,

    But death hath in itself the germ of birth.
It is the falling acorn buds the tree,

    The falling rain that bears the greenery,
    The fern-plants moulder when the ferns arise.

    For there is nothing lives but something dies,
And there is nothing dies but something lives.

    Till skies be fugitives,
Till Time, the hidden root of change, updries,
Are Birth and Death inseparable on earth ;
For they are twain yet one, and Death is Birth.

AFTER-STRAIN

Now with wan ray that other sun of Song

    Sets in the bleakening waters of my soul :
One step, and lo ! the Cross stands gaunt and long

    'Twixt me and yet bright skies, a presaged dole.

Even so, O Cross ! thine is the victory.

    Thy roots are fast within our fairest fields ;
Brightness may emanate in Heaven from thee,
    Here thy dread symbol only shadow yields.

Odes

Of reaped joys thou art the heavy sheaf
Which must be lifted, though the reaper groan ;
Yea, we may cry till Heaven's great ear be deaf,
But we must bear thee, and must bear alone.

Vain were a Simon ; of the Antipodes
Our night not borrows the superfluous day.
Yet woe to him that from his burden flees,
Crushed in the fall of what he cast away.

Therefore, O render Lady, Queen Mary,
Thou gentleness that dost enmoss and drape
The Cross's rigorous austerity,
Wipe thou the blood from wounds that needs must gape.

" Lo, though suns rise and set, but crosses stay,
I leave thee ever," saith she, " light of cheer."
'Tis so : yon sky still thinks upon the Day,
And showers ærial blossoms on his bier.

Yon cloud with wrinkled fire is edged sharp ;
And once more welling through the air, ah me !
How the sweet viol plains him to the harp,
Whose panged sobbings throng tumultuously.

Oh, this Medusa-pleasure with her stings !
This essence of all suffering, which is joy !

Poems of Francis Thompson

I am not thankless for the spell it brings,
Though tears must be told down for the charmed toy.

No ; while soul, sky, and music bleed together,
Let me give thanks even for those griefs in me,
The restless windward stirrings of whose feather
Prove them the brood of immortality.

My soul is quitted of death-neighbouring swoon,
Who shall not slake her immitigable scars
Until she hear " My sister ! " from the moon,
And take the kindred kisses of the stars.

A CAPTAIN OF SONG

(ON A PORTRAIT OF COVENTRY PATMORE
BY J. S. SARGENT, R.A.)

LOOK on him. This is he whose works ye know ;
Ye have adored, thanked, loved him,—no, not him !
But that of him which proud portentous woe
To its own grim
Presentment was not potent to subdue,
Nor all the reek of Erebus to dim.
This, and not him, ye knew.

Odes

Look on him now. Love, worship if ye can,
The very man.
Ye may not. He has trod the ways afar,
The fatal ways of parting and farewell,
Where all the paths of pained greatness are ;
Where round and always round
The abhorred words resound,
The words accursed of comfortable men,—
“ For ever ” ; and infinite glooms intolerable
With spacious replication give again,
And hollow jar,
The words abhorred of comfortable men.
You the stern pities of the gods debar
To drink where he has drunk—
The moonless mere of sighs,
And pace the places infamous to tell,
Where God wipes not the tears from any eyes,
Where-through the ways of dreadful greatness are.
He knows the perilous rout
That all those ways about
Sink into doom, and sinking, still are sunk.
And if his sole and solemn term thereout
He has attained, to love ye shall not dare
One who has journeyed there ;
Ye shall mark well
The mighty cruelties which arm and mar
That countenance of control,
With minatory warnings of a soul

Poems of Francis Thompson

That hath to its own selfhood been most fell,
And is not weak to spare :
And lo, that hair
Is blanchèd with the travel-heats of hell.

If any be
That shall with rites of reverent piety
Approach this strong
Sad soul of sovereign Song,
Nor fail and falter with the intimidate throng ;
If such there be,
These, these are only they
Have trod the self-same way ;
The never-twice-revolving portals heard
    Behind them clang infernal, and that word
    Abhorred sighed of kind mortality,
    As he—
    Ah, even as he !

AGAINST URANIA

LO I, Song's most true lover, plain me sore
That worse than other women she can deceive,
For she being goddess, I have given her more
Than mortal ladies from their loves receive ;
And first of her embrace
She was not coy, and gracious were her ways,

Odes

That I forgot all virgins to adore ;
Nor did I greatly grieve
To bear through arid days
The pretty foil of her divine delays ;
And one by one to cast
Life, love, and health,
Content, and wealth,
Before her, thinking ever on her praise,
Until at last
Nought had I left she would be gracious for.
Now of her cozening I complain me sore,
Seeing her uses,
That still, more constantly she is pursued,
And straitlier wooed,
Her only-adorèd favour more refuses,
And leaves me to implore
Remembered boon in bitterness of blood.

From mortal woman thou may'st know full well,
O poet, that dost deem the fair and tall
Urania of her ways not mutable,
When things shall thee befall
What thou art toiled in her sweet, wild spell.
Do they strow for thy feet
A little tender favour and deceit
Over the sudden mouth of hidden hell ?—
As more intolerable
Her pit, as her first kiss is heavenlier-sweet.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Are they, the more thou sigh,
Still the more watchful-cruel to deny?—
Know this, that in her service thou shalt learn How harder than the heart of woman is
The immortal cruelty
Of the high goddesses.
True is his witness who doth witness this,
Whose gaze too early fell—
Nor thence shall turn,
Nor in those fires shall cease to weep and burn—
Upon her ruinous eyes and ineludible.

SONNETS

TO A CHILD

WHENAS my Life shall time with funeral tread
The heavy death-drum of the beaten hours,
Following, sole mourner, mine own manhood dead,
Poor forgot corse, where not a maid strows flowers ;
When I you love am no more I you love,
But go with unsubservient feet, behold
Your dear face through changed eyes, all grim change prove ;—
A new man, mockèd with misname of old ;
When shamed Love keep his ruined lodging, elf !
When, ceremented in mouldering memory,
Myself is hearsèd underneath myself,
And I am but the monument of me :—
O to that tomb be tender then, which bears
Only the name of him it sepulchres !

HERMES

SOOTHSAY. Behold, with rod twy-serpented,
Hermes the prophet, twining in one power
The woman with the man. Upon his head
The cloudy cap, wherewith he hath in dower
The cloud's own virtue—change and counterchange,
To show in light, and to withdraw in pall,
As mortal eyes best bear. His lineage strange
From Zeus, Truth's sire, and maiden May—the all-Illusive Nature. His fledged feet declare
That 'tis the nether self transdeified,
And the thrice-furnaced passions, which do bear
The poet Olympusward. In him allied
Both parents clasp ; and from the womb of Nature
Stern Truth takes flesh in shows of lovely feature.

HOUSE OF BONDAGE

I

WHEN I perceive Love's heavenly reaping still Regard perforce the clouds' vicissitude,
That the fixed spirit loves not when it will,

Sonnets

But craves its seasons of the flawed blood ;
When I perceive that the high poet doth
Oft voiceless stray beneath the uninfluent stars,
That even Urania of her kiss is loath,
And Song's brave wings fret on their sensual bars ;
When I perceived the fullest-sailed sprite
Lag at most need upon the lethèd seas,
The provident captainship oft voided quite,
And lamed lie deep-draughted argosies ;
I scorn myself, that put for such strange toys
The wit of man to purposes of boys.

II

The spirit's ark sealed with a little clay,
Was old ere Memphis grew a memory ; *
The hand pontifical to break away
That seal what shall surrender ? Not the sea
Which did englut great Egypt and his war,
Nor all the desert-drowned sepulchres.
Love's feet are stained with clay and travel-sore,
And dusty are Song's lucent wing and hairs.
O Love, that must do courtesy to decay,
Eat hasty bread standing with loins up-girt,
How shall this stead thy feet for their sore way ?

* The Ark of the Egyptian temple was sealed with clay, which the Pontiff-King broke when he entered the inner shrine to offer worship.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Ah, Song, what brief embraces balm thy hurt !
Had Jacob's toil full guerdon, casting his Twice-seven heaped years to burn in Rachel's kiss ?

DESIDERIUM INDESIDERATUM

O GAIN that lurk'st ungained in all gain !
O love we just fall short of in all love !
O height that in all heights art still above !
O beauty that dost leave all beauty pain !
Thou unpossessed that mak'st possession vain,
See these strained arms which fright the simple air,
And say what ultimate fairness holds thee, Fair !
They girdle Heaven, and girdle Heaven in vain ;
They shut, and lo ! but shut in their unrest.
Thereat a voice in me that voiceless was :—
" Whom seekest thou through the unmingled
arcane,
And not discern'st to thine own bosom prest ? "
I looked. My clasped arms athwart my breast
Framed the august embraces of the Cross.

MISCELLANEOUS POEMS

DEDICATION OF "POEMS" (1893)

TO WILFRID AND ALICE MEYNELL

If the rose in meek duty
    May dedicate humbly
To her grower the beauty
    Wherewith she is comely ;
If the mine to the miner
    The jewels that pined in it,
Earth to diviner
    The springs he divined in it ;
To the grapes the wine-pitcher
    Their juice that was crushed in it,
Viol to its witcher
    The music lay hushed in it ;
If the lips may pay Gladness
    In laughters she wakened,
And the heart to its sadness
    Weeping unslakened,

Poems of Francis Thompson

If the hid and sealed coffer,
Whose having not his is,
To the losers may proffer
Their finding—here this is ;
Their lives if all livers
To the Life of all living—
To you, O dear givers !
I give your own giving.

DEDICATION OF "NEW POEMS"
(1897)

TO COVENTRY PATMORE

Lo, my book thinks to look Time's leaguer down,
Under the banner of your spread renown !
Or if these levies of impuissant rhyme
Fall to the overthrow of assaulting Time,
Yet this one page shall fend oblivious shame,
Armed with your crested and prevailing Name.

Note.—This dedication was written while the dear friend and great Poet to whom it was addressed yet lived. It is left as he saw it—the last verses of mine that were to pass under his eyes.

Miscellaneous Poems

TO THE DEAD CARDINAL OF WESTMINSTER

(HENRY EDWARD MANNING : DIED JANUARY 1892)

I WILL not perturbate
Thy Paradisal state
    With praise
Of thy dead days ;
To the new-heavened say,—
“ Spirit, thou wert fine clay ” :
    This do,
Thy praise who knew.
Therefore my spirit clings
Heaven's porter by the wings,
    And holds
Its gated golds
Apart, with thee to press
A private business ;—
    Whence,
Deign me audience.
Anchorite, who didst dwell
With all the world for cell,
    My soul
Round me doth roll

Poems of Francis Thompson

A sequestration bare.
Too far alike we were,
    Too far Dissimilar.

For its burning fruitage I
Do climb the tree o' the sky ;
    Do prize
Some human eyes.

You smelt the Heaven-blossoms,
And all the sweets embosoms
    The dear
Uranian year.

Those Eyes my weak gaze shuns,
Which to the suns are Suns,
    Did
Not affray your lid.

The carpet was let down
(With golden moultings strown)
    For you
Of the angels' blue.

But I, ex-Paradised,    \
The shoulder of your Christ
    Find high
To lean thereby.

Miscellaneous Poems

So flaps my helpless sail,
Bellying with neither gale,
Of Heaven
Nor Orcus even.

Life is a coquetry
Of death, which wearies me,
Too sure
Of the amour ;

A tiring-room where I
Death's divers garments try,
Till fit
Some fashion sit.

It seemeth me too much
I do rehearse for such
A mean
And single scene.

The sandy glass hence bear—
Antique remembrancer ;
My veins
Do spare its pains.

With secret sympathy
My thoughts repeat in me
Infirm
The turn o' the worm

Poems of Francis Thompson

Beneath my appointed sod ;
The grave is in my blood ;
    I shake
    To winds that take

Its grasses by the top ;
The rains thereon that drop
    Perturb
    With drip acerb

My subtly answering soul ;
The feet across its knoll
    Do jar
    Me from afar.

As sap foretastes the spring ;
As Earth ere blossoming
    Thrills
    With far daffodils,

And feels her breast turn sweet
With the unconceived wheat ;
    So doth
    My flesh foreloathe

The abhorred spring of Dis,
With seething presciences
    Affirm
    The preparate worm.

Miscellaneous Poems

I have no thought that I,
When at the last I die,
    Shall reach
    To gain your speech.

But you, should that be so,
May very well, I know,
    May well
    To me in hell

With recognising eyes
Look from your Paradise—
    “ God bless
    Thy hopelessness ! ”

Call, holy soul, O call
The hosts angelical,
    And say,—
    “ See, far away

“ Lies one I saw on earth ;
One stricken from his birth
    With curse
    Of destinate verse.

“ What place doth He ye serve
For such sad spirit reserve,—
    Given,
    In dark lieu of Heaven,

“ The impitiable Dæmon,
Beauty, to adore and dream on,
To be Perpetually

“ Hers, but she never his ?
He reapeth miseries,
Foreknows
His wages woes ;

“ He lives detachèd days ;
He serveth not for praise ;
For gold
He is not sold ;

“ Deaf is he to world’s tongue ;
He scorneth for his song
The loud
Shouts of the crowd ;

“ He asketh not world’s eyes ;
Not to world’s ears he cries ;
Saith,—‘ These
Shut, if ye please ; ’

“ He measureth world’s pleasure,
World’s ease, as Saints might measure ;
For hire
Just love entire

Miscellaneous Poems

“ He asks, not grudging pain ;
And knows his asking vain,
And cries—
‘ Love ! Love ! ’ and dies ;

“ In guerdon of long duty,
Unowned by Love or Beauty ;
And goes—
Tell, tell, who knows !

“ Aliens from Heaven’s worth,
Fine beasts who nose i’ the earth,
Do there
Reward prepare.

“ But are his great desires
Food but for nether fires ?
Ah me,
A mystery !

“ Can it be his alone,
To find when all is known,
That what
He solely sought

“ Is lost, and thereto lost
All that its seeking cost ?
That he Must finally,

“ Through sacrificial tears,
And anchoretic years,
    Tryst
With the sensualist ? ”

So ask ; and if they tell
The secret terrible,
    Good friend,
I pray thee send

Some high gold embassy
To teach my unripe age.
    Tell !
Lest my feet walk hell.

A FALLEN YEW

It seemed corral of the world's great prime,
Made to un-edge the scythe of Time,
And last with stateliest rhyme.

No tender Dryad ever did indue
That rigid chiton of rough yew,
To fret her white flesh through :

But some god like to those grim Asgard lords,
Who walk the fables of the hordes
From Scandinavian fjords,

Miscellaneous Poems

Unheaved its stubborn girth, and raised unriven,
Against the whirl-blast and the levin,
Defiant arms to Heaven.

When doom puffed out the stars, we might have said,
It would decline its heavy head,
And see the world to bed.

For this firm yew did from the vassal leas,
And rain and air, its tributaries,
Its revenues increase,

And levy impost on the golden sun,
Take the blind years as they might run,
And no fate seek or shun.

But now our yew is strook, is fallen—yea
Hacked like dull wood of every day
To this and that, men say.

Never !—To Hades' shadowy shipyards gone,
Dim barge of Dis, down Acheron
It drops, or Lethe wan.

Stirred by its fall—poor destined bark of Dis !—
Along my soul a bruit there is
Of echoing images,

Poems of Francis Thompson

Reverberations of mortality :
Spelt backward from its death, to me
Its life reads saddenedly.

Its breast was hollowed as the tooth of eld ;
And boys, there creeping unbeheld,
A laughing moment dwelled.

Yet they, within its very heart so crept,
Reached not the heart that courage kept
With winds and years beswept.

And in its boughs did close and kindly nest
The birds, as they within its breast,
By all its leaves caressed.

But bird nor child might touch by any art
Each other's or the tree's hid heart,
A whole God's breadth apart ;

The breadth of God, the breadth of death and life !
Even so, even so, in undreamed strife
With pulseless Law, the wife,—

The sweetest wife on sweetest marriage-day,—
Their souls at grapple in mid-way,
Sweet to her sweet may say :

Miscellaneous Poems

“ I take you to my inmost heart, my true ! ”
Ah, fool ! but there is one heart you
Shall never take him to !

The hold that falls not when the town is got,
The heart's heart, whose immurèd plot
Hath keys yourself keep not !

Its ports you cannot burst—you are withstood—
For him that to your listening blood
Sends precepts as he would.

Its gates are deaf to Love, high summoner ;
Yea, Love's great warrant runs not there :
You are your prisoner.

Yourself are with yourself the sole consortress
In that unleaguerable fortress ;
It knows you not for portress.

Its keys are at the cincture hung of God ;
Its gates are trepidant to His nod ;
By Him its floors are trod.

And if His feet shall rock those floors in wrath,
Or blest aspersion sleek His path,
Is only choice it hath.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Yea, in that ultimate heart's occult abode
To lie as in an oubliette of God,
Or as a bower untrod,

Built by a secret Lover for His Spouse ;—
Sole choice is this your life allows,
Sad tree, whose perishing boughs
So few birds house !

THE PASSION OF MARY

VERSES IN PASSION-TIDE

O LADY MARY, thy bright crown
Is no mere crown of majesty ;
For with the reflex of His own
Resplendent thorns Christ circled thee.

The red rose of this Passion-tide
Doth take a deeper hue from thee,
In the five wounds of Jesus dyed,
And in thy bleeding thoughts, Mary !

The soldier struck a triple stroke,
That smote thy Jesus on the tree :
He broke the Heart of Hearts, and broke
The Saint's and Mother's hearts in thee.

Miscellaneous Poems

Thy Son went up the angels' ways,
His passion ended ; but, ah me !
Thou found'st the road of further days
A longer way of Calvary :

On the hard cross of hope deferred
Thou hung'st in loving agony,
Until the mortal-dreaded word
Which chills our mirth, spake mirth to thee.

The angel Death from this cold tomb
Of life did roll the stone away ;
And He thou barest in thy womb
Caught thee at last into the day,
Before the living throne of Whom
The Lights of Heaven burning pray.

L'ENVOY

O thou who dwellest in the day !
Behold, I pace amidst the gloom :
Darkness is ever round my way
With little space for sunbeam-room.

Yet Christian sadness is divine
Even as thy patient sadness was :
The salt tears in our life's dark wine
Fell in it from the saving cross.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Bitter the bread of our repast ;
Yet doth a sweet the bitter leaven :
Our sorrow is the shadow cast
Around it by the light of Heaven.

O light in Light, shine down from Heaven !

DREAM-TRYST

THE breaths of kissing night and day
Were mingled in the eastern Heaven :
Throbbing with unheard melody
Shook Lyra all its star-chord seven :
When dusk shrunk cold, and light trod shy,
And dawn's grey eyes were troubled grey ;
And souls went palely up the sky,
And mine to Lucidé.

There was no change in her sweet eyes
Since last I saw those sweet eyes shine ;
There was no change in her deep heart
Since last that deep heart knocked at mine.
Her eyes were clear, her eyes were Hope's,
Wherein did ever come and go
The sparkle of the fountain-drops
From her sweet soul below.

Miscellaneous Poems

The chambers in the house of dreams
Are fed with so divine an air,
That Time's hoar wings grow young therein,
And they who walk there are most fair.
I joyed for me, I joyed for her,
Who with the Past meet girt about :
Where our last kiss still warms the air,
Nor can her eyes go out.

" WHERETO ART THOU COME ? "

" FRIEND, whereto art thou come ? " Thus Verity ;
Of each that to the world's sad Olivet
Comes with no multitude, but alone by night,
Lit with the one torch of his lifted soul,
Seeking her that he may lay hands on her ;
Thus : and waits answer from the mouth of deed.
Truth is a maid, whom men woo diversely ;
This, as a spouse ; that, as a light-o'-love,
To know, and having known, to make his brag.
But woe to him that takes the immortal kiss,
And not estates her in his housing life,
Mother of all his seed ! So he betrays,
Not Truth, the unbetrayable, but himself :
And with his kiss's rated traitor-craft
The Haceldama of a plot of days
He buys, to consummate his Judasry
Therein with Judas' guerdon of despair.

A DEAD ASTRONOMER

(FATHER PERRY, S.J.)

STARRY amorist, starward gone,
Thou art—what thou didst gaze upon !
Passed through thy golden garden's bars,
Thou seest the Gardener of the Stars.

She, about whose moonèd brows
Seven stars make seven glows,
Seven lights for seven woes ;
She, like thine own Galaxy,
All lustres in one purity :—
What said'st thou, Astronomer,
When thou did'st discover her ?
When thy hand its tube let fall,
Thou found'st the fairest Star of all !

AN ANTHEM OF EARTH

PRÆMION

IMMEASURABLE Earth !
Through the loud vast and populacy of Heaven,
Tempestèd with gold schools of ponderous orbs,
That cleav'st with deep-revolving harmonics

Miscellaneous Poems

Passage perpetual, and behind thee draw'st
A furrow sweet, a cometary wake
Of trailing music ! What large effluence,
Not sole the cloudy sighing of thy seas,
Nor thy blue-coifing air, encases thee
From prying of the stars, and the broad shafts
Of thrusting sunlight tempers ? For, dropped near
From my removed tour in the serene
Of utmost contemplation, I scent lives.
This is the efflux of thy rocks and fields,
And wind-cuffed forestage, and the souls of men,
And aura of all treaders over thee ;
A sentient exhalation, wherein close
The odorous lives of many-throated flowers,
And each thing's mettle effused ; that so thou
    wear'st,
Even like a breather on a frosty morn,
Thy proper suspiration. For I know,
Albeit, with custom-dulled perceivingness,
Nestled against thy breast, my sense not take
The breathings of thy nostrils, there's no tree.
No grain of dust, nor no cold-seeming stone,
But wears a fume of its circumfluous self.
Thine own life and the lives of all that live,
The issue of thy loins,
In this thy gaberdine,
Wherein thou walkest through thy large demesne
And sphyry pleasancess,—

Poems of Francis Thompson

Amazing the unstalèd eyes of Heaven,
And us that still a precious seeing have
Behind this dim and mortal jelly.

Ah !

If not in all too late and frozen a day
I come in rearward of the throats of song,
Unto the deaf sense of the agèd year
Singing with doom upon me ; yet give heed !
One poet with sick pinion, that still feels Breath through the Orient gateways closing fast,
Fast closing t'ward the undelighted night !

ANTHEM

IN nescientness, in nescientness,
Mother, we put these fleshly lendings on
Thou yield'st to thy poor children ; took thy gift
Of life, which must, in all the after-days,
Be craved again with tears,—
With fresh and still-petitionary tears.
Being once bound thine almsmen for that gift,
We are bound to beggary, nor our own can call
The journal dole of customary life,
But after suit obsequious for't to thee.
Indeed this flesh, O Mother,
A beggar's gown, a client's badging,
We find, which from thy hands we simply took,

Miscellaneous Poems

Nought dreaming of the after penury,
In nescientness.

In a little joy, in a little joy,
We wear awhile thy sore insignia,
Nor know thy heel o' the neck. O Mother !
Mother !

Then what use knew I of thy solemn robes,
But as a child, to play with them ? I bade thee
Leave thy great husbandries, thy grave designs,
Thy tedious state which irked my ignorant years,
Thy winter-watches, suckling of the grain,
Severe premeditation taciturn
Upon the brooded Summer, thy chill cares,
And all thy ministries majestic,
To sport with me, thy darling. Thought I not Thou set'st thy seasons forth processional
To pamper me with pageant,—thou thyself
My fellow-gamester, appanage of mine arms ?
Then what wild Dionysia I, young Bacchanal,
Danced in thy lap ! Ah for thy gravity !
Then, O Earth, thou rang'st beneath me,
Rocked to Eastward, rocked to Westward,
Even with the shifted
Poise and footing of my thought !
I brake through thy doors of sunset,
Ran before the hooves of sunrise,
Shook thy matron tresses down in fancies

Poems of Francis Thompson

Wild and wilful
As a poet's hand could twine them ;
Caught in my fantasy's crystal chalice
The Bow, as its cataract of colours
Plashed to thee downward ;
Then when thy circuit swung to nightward,
Night the abhorred, night was a new dawning,
Celestial dawning
Over the ultimate margins of the soul ;
Dusk grew turbulent with fire before me,
And like a windy arras waved with dreams.
Sleep I took not for my bedfellow,
Who could waken
To a revel, an inexhaustible
Wassail of orgiastic imageries ;
Then while I wore thy sore insignia
In a little joy, O Earth, in a little joy ;
Loving thy beauty in all creatures born of thee,
Children, and the sweet-essenced body of woman ;
Feeling not yet upon my neck thy foot,
But breathing warm of thee as infants breathe
New from their mother's morning bosom. So I,
Risen from thee, restless winnower of the heaven,
Most Hermes-like, did keep
My vital and resilient path, and felt
The play of wings about my fledgèd heel—
Sure on the verges of precipitous dream,
Swift in its springing

Miscellaneous Poems

From jut to jut of inaccessible fancies,
In a little joy.

In a little thought, in a little thought,
We stand and eye thee in a grave dismay,
With sad and doubtful questioning, when first
Thou speak'st to us as men : like sons who hear
Newly their mother's history, unthought
Before, and say—" She is not as we dreamed :
Ah me ! we are beguiled ! " What art thou, then,
That art not our conceiving ? Art thou not Too old for thy young children ? Or perchance,
Keep'st thou a youth perpetual-burnishable
Beyond thy sons decrepit ? It is long
Since Time was first a fledgling ;
Yet thou may'st be but as a pendant bulla
Against his stripling bosom swung. Alack !
For that we seem indeed
To have slipped the world's great leaping-time, and come
Upon thy pinched and dozing days : these weeds,
These corporal leavings, thou not cast'st us new,
Fresh from thy craftship, like the lilies' coats,
But foist'st us off
With hasty tarnished piecings negligent,
Snippets and waste
From old ancestral wearings,
That have seen sorrier usage ; remainder-flesh

Poems of Francis Thompson

After our father's surfeits ; nay with chinks,
Some of us, that if speech may have free leave
Our souls go out at elbows. We are sad
With more than our sires' heaviness, and with More than their weakness weak ; we shall not be Mighty with all their mightiness, nor shall not Rejoice with all their joy. Ay, Mother ! Mother !
What is this Man, thy darling kissed and cuffed,
Thou lustingly engender'st,
To sweat, and make his brag, and rot,
Crowned with all honour and all shamefulness ?
From nightly towers
He dogs the secret footsteps of the heavens,
Sifts in his hands the stars, weighs them as gold-
dust,
And yet is he successive unto nothing
But patrimony of a little mould,
And entail of four planks. Thou hast made his mouth
Avid of all dominion and all mightiness,
All sorrow, all delight, all topless grandeurs,
All beauty, and all starry majesties,
And dim transtellar things ;—even that it may,
Filled in the ending with a puff of dust,
Confess—" It is enough." The world left empty What that poor mouthful crams. His heart is builded
For pride, for potency, infinity,

Miscellaneous Poems

All heights, all deeps, and all immensities,
Arrased with purple like the house of kings,—
To stall the grey-rat, and the carrion-worm
Statelily lodge. Mother of mysteries !
Sayer of dark sayings in a thousand tongues,
Who bringest forth no saying yet so dark
As we ourselves, thy darkest ! We the young,
In a little thought, in a little thought,
At last confront thee, and ourselves in thee,
And wake disgarmented of glory : as one
On a mount standing, and against him stands,
On the mount adverse, crowned with westering rays,
The golden sun, and they two brotherly
Gaze each on each ;
He faring down
To the dull vale, his Godhead peels from him
Till he can scarcely spurn the pebble—
For nothingness of new-found mortality—
That mutinies against his galled foot.
Littly he sets him to the daily way,
With all around the valleys growing grave,
And known things changed and strange ; but he holds on,
Though all the land of light be widowed,
In a little thought.

In a little strength, in a little strength,
We affront thy unveiled face intolerable,

Poems of Francis Thompson

Which yet we do sustain.
Though I the Orient never more shall feel
Break like a clash of cymbals, and my heart
Clang through my shaken body like a gong ;
Nor ever more with spurted feet shall tread
I' the winepresses of song ; nought 's truly lost
That moulds to sprout forth gain : now I have on me

The high Phœbean priesthood, and that craves
An unrash utterance ; not with flaunted hem
May the Muse enter in behind the veil,
Nor, though we hold the sacred dances good,
Shall the holy Virgins mænadize : ruled lips
Befit a votaress Muse.

Thence with no mutable, nor no gelid love,
I keep, O Earth, thy worship,
Though life slow, and the sobering Genius change
To a lamp his gusty torch. What though no more

Athwart its roseal glow
Thy face look forth triumphal ? Thou put'st 'on Strange sanctities of pathos ; like this knoll
Made derelict of day,
Couchant and shadowèd
Under dim Vesper's overloosened hair :
This, where embossèd with the half-blown seed
The solemn purple thistle stands in grass
Grey as an exhalation, when the bank

Holds mist for water in the nights of Fall.
Not to the boy, although his eyes be pure
As the prime snowdrop is,
Ere the rash Phœbus break her cloister
Of sanctimonious snow ;
Or Winter fasting sole on Himalay
Since those dove-nuncioed days
When Asia rose from bathing ;
Not to such eyes,
Uneuphrasied with tears, the hierarchical
Vision lies unoccult, rank under rank
Through all create down-wheeling, from the Throne
Even to the bases of the pregnant ooze.
This is the enchantment, this the exaltation,
The all-compensating wonder,
Giving to common things wild kindred
With the gold-tesserate floors of Jove ;
Linking such heights and such humilities
Hand in hand in ordinal dances,
That I do think my tread,
Stirring the blossoms in the meadow-grass,
Flickers the unwithering stars.
This to the shunless fardel of the world
Nerves my uncurbèd back ; that I endure,
The monstrous Temple's moveless caryatid,
With wide eyes calm upon the whole of things,
In a little strength.

Poems of Francis Thompson

In a little sight, in a little sight,
We learn from what in thee is credible
The incredible, with bloody clutch and feet
Clinging the painful juts of jagged faith.
Science, old noser in its prideful straw,
That with anatomising scalpel tents
Its three-inch of thy skin, and brags—"All'

The eyeless worm, that boring works the soil,
Making it capable for the crops of God ;
Against its own dull will
Ministers poppies to our troublous thought,
A Balaam come to prophecy,—parables,
Nor of its parable itself is ware,
Grossly unwotting ; all things has expounded
Reflux and influx, counts the sepulchre
The seminary of being, and extinction
The Ceres of existence : it discovers
Life in putridity, vigour in decay ;
Dissolution even, and disintegration,
Which in our dull thoughts symbolise disorder,
Finds in God's thoughts irrefragable order,
And admirable the manner of our corruption
As of our health. It grafts upon the cypress
The tree of Life—Death dies on his own dart
Promising to our ashes perpetuity,
And to our perishable elements
Their proper imperishability ; extracting

Medicaments from out mortality
Against too mortal cogitation ; till
Even of the caput mortuum we do thus
Make a memento vivere. To such uses
I put the blinding knowledge of the fool,
Who in no order seeth ordinance ;
Nor thrust my arm in nature shoulder-high,
And cry—"There's nought beyond !" How should I so,
That cannot with these arms of mine engirdle
All which I am ; that am a foreigner
In mine own region ? Who the chart shall draw
Of the strange courts and vaulty labyrinths,
The spacious tenements and wide pleasancess,
Innumerable corridors far-withdrawn,
Where I wander darkling, of myself ?
Darkling I wander, nor I dare explore
The long arcane of those dim catacombs,
Where the rat memory does its burrows make,
Close-seal them as I may, and my stolen tread
Starts populace, a gens lucifuga ;
That too strait seems my mind my mind to hold,
And I myself incontinent of me.
Then go I, my foul-venting ignorance
With scabby sapience plastered, aye forsooth !
Clap my wise foot-rule to the walls o' the world,
And vow—A goodly house, but something ancient,
And I can find no Master ? Rather, nay,

Poems of Francis Thompson

By baffled seeing, something I divine
Which baffles, and a seeing set beyond ;
And so with strenuous gazes sounding down,
Like to the day-long porer on a stream,
Whose last look is his deepest, I beside
This slow perpetual Time stand patiently,
In a little sight.

In a little dust, in a little dust,
Earth, thou reclaim'st us, who do all our lives
Find of thee but Egyptian villeinage.
Thou dost this body, this enshavocked realm,
Subject to ancient and ancestral shadows ;
Descended passions sway it ; it is distraught
With ghostly usurpation, dinned and fretted
With the still-tyrannous dead ; a haunted tenement,
Peopled from barrows and outworn ossuaries.
Thou giv'st us life not half so willingly
As thou undost thy giving ; thou that teem'st
The stealthy terror of the sinuous pard,
The lion maned with curled puissance,
The serpent, and all fair strong beasts of ravin,
Thyself most fair and potent beast of ravin ;
And thy great eaters thou, the greatest, eat'st.
Thou hast devoured mammoth and mastodon,
And many a floating bank of fangs,
The scaly scourges of thy primal brine,

And the tower-crested plesiosaur.
Thou fill'st thy mouth with nations, gorgest slow
On purple æons of kings ; man's hulking towers
Are carcase for thee, and to modern sun
Disglutt'st their splintered bones.
Rabble of Pharaohs and Arsacidae
Keep their cold house within thee ; thou hast sucked down
How many Ninevehs and Hecatompyloi,
And perished cities whose great phantasmata
O'erbrow the silent citizens of Dis :—
Hast not thy fill ?
Tarry awhile, lean Earth, for thou shalt drink,
Even till thy dull throat sicken,
The draught thou grow'st most fat on ; hear'st thou
not
The world's knives bickering in their sheaths ? O patience !
Much offal of a foul world comes thy way,
And man's superfluous cloud shall soon be laid
In a little blood.

In a little peace, in a little peace,
Thou dost rebate thy rigid purposes
Of imposed being, and relenting, mend'st
Too much, with nought. The westering Phœbus' horse
Paws i' the lucent dust as when he shocked

Poems of Francis Thompson

The East with rising ; O how may I trace
In this decline that morning when we did
Sport 'twixt the claws of newly-whelped existence,
Which had not yet learned rending ? we did
then

Divinely stand, not knowing yet against us
Sentence had passed of life, nor commutation
Petitioning into death. What's he that of The Free State argues ? Tellus ! bid him stoop,
Even where the low hic jacet answers him ;
Thus low, O Man ! there's freedom's seignory,
Tellus' most reverend sole free commonweal,
And model deeply-policied : there none
Stands on precedence, nor ambitiously
Woos the impartial worm, whose favours kiss
With liberal largesse all ; there each is free
To be e'en what he must, which here did strive
So much to be he could not ; there all do
Their uses just, with no flown questioning.
To be took by the hand of equal earth
They doff her livery, slip to the worm,
Which lacqueys them, their suits of maintenance,
And that soiled workaday apparel cast,
Put on condition : Death's ungentle buffet
Alone makes ceremonial manumission ;
So are the heavenly statutes set, and those Uranian tables of the primal Law.
In a little peace, in a little peace,

Miscellaneous Poems

Like fierce beasts that a common thirst makes brothers,
We draw together to one hid dark lake ;
In a little peace, in a little peace,
We drain with all our burthens of dishonour
Into the cleansing sands o' the thirsty grave,
The fiery pomps, brave exhalations,
And all the glistering shows o' the seeming world,
Which the sight aches at, we unwinking see
Through the smoked glass of Death ; Death, wherewith's fined
The muddy wine of life ; that earth doth purge
Of her plethora of man ; Death, that doth flush
The cumbered gutters of humanity ;
Nothing, of nothing king, with front uncrowned,
Whose hand holds crownets ; playmate swart o' the strong ;
Tenebrous moon that flux and reflux draws
Of the high-tided man ; skull-housed asp
That stings the heel of kings ; true Fount of Youth,
Where he that dips is deathless ; being's drone-pipe ;
Whose nostril turns to blight the shrivelled stars,
And thicks the lusty breathing of the sun ;
Pontifical Death, that doth the crevasse bridge
To the steep and trifid God ; one mortal birth
That broker is of immortality.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Under this dreadful brother uterine,
This kinsman feared, Tellus, behold me come,
Thy son stern-nursed ; who mortal-motherlike,
To turn thy weanlings' mouth averse, embitter'st
Thine over-childed breast. Now, mortal-sonlike,
I thou hast suckled, Mother, I at last
Shall sustenant be to thee. Here I untrammel,
Here I pluck loose the body's cerementing,
And break the tomb of life ; here I shake off
The bur o' the world, man's congregation shun,
And to the antique order of the dead
I take the tongueless vows : my cell is set
Here in thy bosom ; my little trouble is ended
In a little peace.

A JUDGEMENT IN HEAVEN

ATHWART the sod which is treading for God * the poet paced with his splendid eyes ;
Paradise-verdure he stately passes * to win to the Father of Paradise,
Through the conscious and palpitant grasses * of intertangled relucient dyes.

Note.—I have throughout this poem used an asterisk to indicate the caesura in the middle of the line, after the manner of the old Saxon section-point.

Miscellaneous Poems

The angels a-play on its fields of Summer * (their wild wings rustled his guides' cymars)
Looked up from disport at the passing corner, * as they pelted each other with handfuls of stars ;
And the warden-spirits with startled feet rose, *
hand on sword, by their tethered cars.

With plumes night - tintured englobed and cinctured, * of Saints, his guided steps held on To where on the far crystalline pale * of that transtellar Heaven there shone
The immutable crocean dawn * effusing from the Father's Throne.

Through the reverberant Eden-ways * the bruit of his great advent driven,
Back from the fulgent justle and press * with mighty echoing so was given,
As when the surly thunder smites * upon the clanged gates of Heaven.

Over the bickering gonfalons, * far-ranged as for Tartarean wars,
Went a waver of ribbed fire * —as night-seas on phosphoric bars
Like a flame-plumed fan shake slowly out * their ridgy reach of crumbling stars.

Poems of Francis Thompson

At length to where on His fretted Throne * sat in the heart of His aged dominions
The great Triune, and Mary nigh, * lit round with spears of their bauberked minions,
The poet drew, in the thunderous blue * involved dread of those mounted pinions.

As in a secret and tenebrous cloud * the watcher from the disquiet earth
At momentary intervals * beholds from its ragged rifts break forth
The flash of a golden perturbation, * the travelling threat of a witchèd birth ;

Till heavily parts a sinister chasm, * a grisly jaw,
whose verges soon,
Slowly and ominously filled * by the on-coming plenilune,
Supportlessly congest with fire, * and suddenly spit forth the moon :—

With beauty, not terror, through tangled error * of night-dipt plumes so burned their charge ;
Swayed and parted the globing clusters * so,—disclosed from their kindling marge,
Roseal-chapleted, splendent-vestured, * the Poet
there where God's light lay large.

Miscellaneous Poems

Hu, hu ! a wonder ! a wonder ! see, * clasping
the Poet's glories clings
A dingy creature, even to laughter * cloaked and clad in patchwork things,
Shrinking close from the unused glows * of the seraphs' versicoloured wings.

A rhymet, rhyming a futile rhyme, * he had crept for convoy through Eden-ways
Into the shade of the Poet's glory, * darkened under his prevalent rays,
Fearfully hoping a distant welcome * as a poor kinsman of his lays.

The angels laughed with a lovely scorning ; *
—" Who has done this sorry deed in The garden of our Father, God ? * 'mid his blossoms to sow this weed in ?
Never our fingers knew this stuff : * not so fashion
the looms of Eden ! "

The Poet bowed his brow majestic, * searching that patchwork through and through,
Feeling God's lucent gazes traverse * his singing-
stoling and spirit too :
The hallowed harpers were fain to frown * on the strange thing come 'mid their sacred crew,
Only the Poet that was earth * his fellow-earth and his own self knew.

Poems of Francis Thompson

But the poet rent off robe and wreath, * so as a sloughing serpent doth,
Laid them at the rhymer's feet, * shed down wreath and raiment both,
Stood in a dim and shamèd stole, * like the tattered wing of a musty moth.

(The Poet addresses his Maker)

"Thou gav'st the weed and wreath of song, * the weed and wreath are solely Thine,
And this dishonest vesture * is the only vesture
that is mine ;
The life I textured, Thou the song : * ——my handicraft is not divine ! "

(The Poet addresses the Rhymer)

He wrested o'er the Rhymer's head * that garment-
ing which wrought him wrong ;
A flickering tissue argentine * down dripped its shivering silvers long :—
"Better thou wov'st thy woof of life * than thou didst weave thy woof of song ! "

Never a chief in Saintdom was, * but turned him from the Poet then ;
Never an eye looked mild on him * 'mid all the angel myriads ten,
Save sinless Mary, and sinful Mary * —the Mary titled Magdalen.

Miscellaneous Poems

“ Turn yon robe,” spake Magdalen, * “ of torn bright song, and see and feel.”

They turned the raiment, saw and felt * what their turning did reveal—

All the inner surface piled * with bloodied hairs, like hairs of steel.

“ Take, I pray, yon chaplet up, * thrown down ruddied from his head.”

They took the roseal chaplet up, * and they stood astonishèd :

Every leaf between their fingers, * as they bruised
it, burst and bled.

“ See his torn flesh through those rents ; * see the punctures round his hair,

As if the chaplet-flowers had driven * deep roots in to nourish there—

Lord, who gav’st him robe and wreath, * what was this Thou gav’st for wear ? ”

“ Fetch forth the Paradisal garb ! ” * spake the Father, sweet and low ;

Drew them both by the frightened hand * where Mary’s throne made irised bow—

“ Take, Princess Mary, of thy good grace, * two spirits greater than they know.”

Poems of Francis Thompson

EPILOGUE TO

"A JUDGEMENT IN HEAVEN"

VIRTUE may unlock hell, or even
A sin turn in the wards of Heaven,
(As ethics of the text-book go,)
So little men their own deeds know,
Or through the intricate mêlée
Guess whitherward draws the battle-sway ;
So little, if they know the deed,
Discern what therefrom shall succeed.
To wisest moralists 'tis but given
To work rough border-law of Heaven,
Within this narrow life of ours,
These marches 'twixt delimitless Powers.
Is it, if Heaven the future showed,
Is it the all-severest mode
To see ourselves with the eyes of God ?
God rather grant, at His assize,
He see us not with our own eyes !

Heaven, which man's generations draws,
Nor deviates into replicas,
Must of as deep diversity
In judgment as creation be.
There is no expeditious road
To pack and label men for God,
And save them by the barrel-load.
Some may perchance, with strange surprise,

Miscellaneous Poems

Have blundered into Paradise.
In vasty dusk of life abroad,
They fondly thought to err from God,
Nor knew the circle that they trod ;
And wandering all the night about,
Found them at morn where they set out.
Death dawned ; Heaven lay in prospect wide :—
Lo ! they were standing by His side !

The Rhymer a life uncomplex,
With just such cares as mortals vex,
So simply felt as all men feel,
Lived purely out to his soul's weal.
A double life the Poet lived,
And with a double burthen grieved ;
The life of flesh and life of song,
The pangs to both lives that belong ;
Immortal knew and mortal pain,
Who in two worlds could lose and gain,
And found immortal fruits must be
Mortal through his mortality.
The life of flesh and life of song !
If one life worked the other wrong,
What expiating agony
May for him, damned to poesy,
Shut in that little sentence be—
What deep austerities of strife—
“ He lived his life.” He lived his life !

DAPHNE

THE river-god's daughter,—the sun-god sought her,
Sleeping with never a zephyr by her.
Under the noon he made his prey sure,
Woofed in weeds of a woven azure,
As down he shot in a whistle of fire.

Slid off, fair daughter ! her vesturing water ;
Like a cloud from the scourge of the winds fled
she :
With the breath in her hair of the keen Apollo,
And feet less fleet than the feet that follow,
She throes in his arms to a laurel-tree.

Risen out of birth's waters the soul distraught errs,
Nor whom nor whither she fieth knows she :
With the breath in her hair of the keen Apollo,
And fleet the beat of the feet that follow,
She throes in his arms to a poet, woe's me !

You plucked the boughed verse the poet bears—
It shudders and bleeds as it snaps from the tree.
A love-banning love, did the god but know it,
Which barks the man about with the poet,
And muffles his heart of mortality !

Miscellaneous Poems

Yet I translate—ward of song's gate !—
Perchance all ill this mystery.
We both are struck with the self-same quarrel ;
We grasp the maiden, and clasp the laurel—
Do we weep or we laugh more, Phoebe mi?

“ His own green lays, unwithering bays,
Gird Keats' unwithering brow,” say ye?
O fools, that is only the empty crown !
The sacred head has laid it down
With Hob, Dick, Marian, and Margery.

TO THE SINKING SUN

How graciously thou wear'st the yoke
Of use that does not fail !
The grasses, like an anchored smoke,
Ride in the bending gale ;
This knoll is snowed with blosmy manna,
And fire-dropt as a seraph's mail.

Here every eve thou stretchest out
Untarnishable wing,
And marvellously bring'st about
Newly an olden thing ;
Nor ever through like-ordered heaven
Moves largely thy grave progressing.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Here every eve thou goest down
Behind the self-same hill,
Nor ever twice alike go'st down
Behind the self-same hill ;
Nor like-ways is one flame-sopped flower
Possessed with glory past its will.

Not twice alike ! I am not blind,
My sight is live to see ;
And yet I do complain of thy Weary variety.
O Sun ! I ask thee less or more,
Change not at all, or utterly !

O give me unprevisioned new,
Or give to change reprieve !
For new in me is olden too,
That I for sameness grieve.
O flowers ! O grasses ! be but once
The grass and flower of yester-eve !

Wonder and sadness are the lot
Of change : thou yield'st mine eyes
Grief of vicissitude, but not
Its penetrant surprise.
Immutability mutable
Burthens my spirit and the skies.

Miscellaneous Poems

O altered joy, all joyed of yore,
Plodding in unconned ways !
O grief grieved out, and yet once more
A dull, new, staled amaze !
I dream, and all was dreamed before,
Or dream I so ? the dreamer says.

A MAY BURDEN

THROUGH meadow-ways as I did tread,
The corn grew in great lustihead,
And hey ! the beeches burgeoned.
By Goddès fay, by Goddès fay !
It is the month, the jolly month,
It is the jolly month of May.

God ripe the wines and corn, I say,
And wenches for the marriage-day,
And boys to teach love's comely play.
By Goddès fay, by Goddès fay !
It is the month, the jolly month,
It is the jolly month of May.

As I went down by lane and lea,
The daisies reddened so, pardie !

Note.—The first two stanzas are from a French original—
I have forgotten what.

Poems of Francis Thompson

" Blushets ! " I said, " I well do see,
By Goddès fay, by Goddès fay !
The thing ye think of in this month,
Heigho ! this jolly month of May."

As down I went by rye and oats,
The blossoms smelt of kisses ; throats
Of birds turned kisses into notes ;
By Goddès fay, by Goddès fay !
The kiss it is a growing flower,
I trow, this jolly month of May !

God send a mouth to every kiss,
Seeing the blossom of this bliss
By gathering doth grow, certes !
By Goddès fay, by Goddès fay !
Thy brow-garland pushed all aslant
Tells—but I tell not, wanton May !

FIELD-FLOWER

A PHANTASY

GOD took a fit of Paradise-wind,
A slip of coerule weather,
A thought as simple as Himself,
And ravelled them together.

Miscellaneous Poems

Unto His eyes He held it there,
To teach it gazing debonair
    With memory of what, perdie,
A God's young innocences were.
His fingers pushed it through the sod—
It came up redolent of God,
Garrulous of the eyes of God
    To all the breezes near it ;
Musical of the mouth of God
    To all had eyes to hear it ;
Mystical with the mirth of God,
    That glow-like did ensphere it.
    And—" Babble ! babble ! babble ! " said,
    " I'll tell the whole world one day ! "
    There was no blossom half so glad,
    Since sun of Christ's first Sunday.

A poet took a flaw of pain,
A hap of skiey pleasure,
A thought had in his cradle lain,
And mingled them in measure.
That chrism he laid upon his eyes,
And lips, and heart, for euphrasies,
    That he might see, feel, sing, perdie,
The simple things that are the wise.
Beside the flower he held his ways,
And leaned him to it gaze for gaze—
He took its meaning, gaze for gaze,

Poems of Francis Thompson

As baby looks on baby ;
Its meaning passed into his gaze,
Native as meaning may be ;
He rose with all his shining gaze
As children's eyes at play be.
*And—" Babble ! babble ! babble ! " said,
" I'll tell the whole world one day ! "
There was no poet half so glad,
Since man grew God that Sunday.*

TO A SNOWFLAKE

WHAT heart could have thought you ?—
Past our devisal
(O filigree petal !)
Fashioned so purely,
Fragilely, surely,
From what Paradisal
Imagineless metal,
Too costly for cost ?
Who hammered you, wrought you,
From argentine vapour ?—
" God was my shaper.
Passing surmised,
He hammered, He wrought me,
From curled silver vapour,
To lust of His mind :—

Miscellaneous Poems

Thou could'st not have thought me !
So purely, so palely,
Tiniely, surely,
Mightily, frailly,
Insculped and embossed,
With His hammer of wind,
And His graver of frost."

A QUESTION

O BIRD with heart of wassail,
That toss the Bacchic branch,
And slip your shaken music,
An elfin avalanche ;

Come tell me, O tell me,
My poet of the blue !
What's your thought of me, Sweet ?—
Here's my thought of you.

A small thing, a wee thing,
A brown fleck of naught ;
With winging and singing
That who could have thought ?

A small thing, a wee thing,
A brown amaze withal,
That fly a pitch more azure
Because you're so small.

Poems of Francis Thompson

Bird, I'm a small thing—
My angel describes ;
With winging and singing
That who could surmise ?

Ah, small things, ah, wee things,
Are the poets all,
Whose tour's the more azure
Because they're so small.

The angels hang watching
The tiny men-things :—
“ The dear speck of flesh, see,
With such daring wings !

“ Come, tell us, O tell us,
Thou strange mortality !
What's thy thought of us, Dear ?—
Here's our thought of thee.”

“ Alack ! you tall angels,
I can't think so high !
I can't think what it feels like
Not to be I.”

Come tell me, O tell me,
My poet of the blue !
What's your thought of me, Sweet ?—
Here's my thought of you.

THE CLOUD'S SWAN-SONG

THERE is a parable in the pathless cloud,
There's prophecy in heaven,—they did not lie,
The Chaldee shepherds,—sealed from the proud,
To cheer the weighted heart that mates the seeing eye.

A lonely man, oppressed with lonely ills,
And all the glory fallen from my song,
Here do I walk among the windy hills ;
The wind and I keep both one monotoning tongue.

Like grey clouds one by one my songs upsoar
Over my soul's cold peaks ; and one by one
They loose their little rain, and are no more ;
And whether well or ill, to tell me there is none.

For 'tis an alien tongue, of alien things,
From all men's care, how miserably apart !
Even my friends say : " Of what is this he sings ? "
And barren is my song, and barren is my heart.

For who can work, unwitting his work's worth ?
Better, meseems, to know the work for naught,
Turn my sick course back to the kindly earth,
And leave to ampler plumes the jetting tops of thought,

Poems of Francis Thompson

And visitations, that do often use
Remote, unhappy, inauspicious sense
Of doom, and poets widowed of their muse,
And what dark 'gan, dark ended, in me did commence.

I thought of spirit wronged by mortal ills,
And my flesh rotting on my fate's dull stake ;
And how self-scorned they the bounty fills
Of others, and the bread, even of their dearest, take.

I thought of Keats, that died in perfect time,
In predecease of his just-sickening song ;
Of him that set, wrapt in his radiant rhyme,
Sunlike in sea. Life longer had been life too long.

But I, exanimate of quick Poesy,—
O then no more but even a soulless corse !
Nay, my Delight dies not : 'tis I should be
Her dead, a stringless harp on which she had no force.

Of my wild lot I thought ; from place to place,
Apollo's song-bowed Scythian, I go on ;
Making in all my home, with pliant ways,
But, provident of change, putting forth root in none.

Miscellaneous Poems

Now, with starved brain, sick body, patience galled
With fardels even to wincing ; from fair sky
Fell sudden little rain, scarce to be called
A shower, which of the instant was gone wholly by.

What cloud thus died I saw not ; heaven was fair.
Methinks my angel plucked my locks : I bowed
My spirit, shamed ; and looking in the air :—
“ Even so,” I said, “ even so, my brother the good Cloud ? ”

It was a pilgrim of the fields of air,
Its home was allwheres the wind left it rest,
And in a little forth again did fare,
And in all places was a stranger and a guest.

It harked all breaths of heaven, and did obey
With sweet peace their uncomprehended wills ;
It knew the eyes of stars which made no stay,
And with the thunder walked upon the lonely hills.

And from the subject earth it seemed to scorn,
It drew the sustenance whereby it grew
Perfect in bosom for the married Morn,
And of his life and light full as a maid kissed new.

Its also darkness of the face withdrawn,
And the long waiting for the little light,

Poems of Francis Thompson

So long in life so little. Like a fawn
It fled with tempest breathing hard at heel of flight;

And having known full East, did not disdain
To sit in shadow and oblivious cold,
Save what all loss doth of its loss retain,
And who hath held hath somewhat that he still must hold.

Right poet ! who thy rightness to approve,
Having all liberty, didst keep all measure,
And with a firmament for ranging, move
But at the heavens' uncomprehended pleasure.

With amplitude unchecked, how sweetly thou
Didst wear the ancient custom of the skies,
And yoke of used prescription ; and thence how
Find gay variety no license could devise !

As we the quested beauties better wit
Of the one grove our own than forests great,
Restraint, by the delighted search of it,
Turns to right scope. For lovely moving intricate

Is put to fair devising in the curb
Of ordered limit ; and all-changeeful Hermes
Is Terminus as well. Yet we perturb
Our souls for latitude, whose strength in bound and term is.

Miscellaneous Poems

How far am I from heavenly liberty,
That play at policy with change and fate,
Who should my soul from foreign broils keep free,
In the fast-guarded frontiers of its single state !

Could I face firm the Is, and with To-be Trust Heaven ; to Heaven commit the deed, and do ;

In power contained, calm in infirmity,
And fit myself to change with virtue ever new ;

Thou hadst not shamed me, cousin of the sky,
Thou wandering kinsman, that didst sweetly live
Unnoted, and unnoted sweetly die,
Weeping more gracious song than any I can weave ;

Which these gross-tissued words do sorely wrong.
Thou hast taught me on powerlessness a power ;
To make song wait on life, not life on song ;
To hold sweet not too sweet, and bread for bread
though sour ;

By law to wander, to be strictly free.
With tears ascended from the heart's sad sea,
Ah, such a silver song to Death could I
Sing, Pain would list, forgetting Pain to be,
And Death would tarry marvelling, and forget to die !

NOCTURN

I WALK, I only,
Not I only wake ;
Nothing is, this sweet night,
But doth couch and wake
For its love's sake ;
Everything, this sweet night,
Couches with its mate.
For whom but for the stealthy-visitant sun
Is the naked moon
Tremulous and elate ?
The heaven hath the earth
Its own and all apart ;
The hushèd pool holdeth
A star to its heart.
You may think the rose sleepeth,
But though she folded is,
The wind doubts her sleeping ;
Not all the rose sleeps,
But smiles in her sweet heart
For crafty bliss.
The wind lieth with the rose,
And when he stirs, she stirs in her repose :
The wind hath the rose,
And the rose her kiss,
Ah, mouth of me !

Miscellaneous Poems

Is it then that this
Seemeth much to thee ?—
I wander only.
The rose hath her kiss.

HEAVEN AND HELL

'Tis said there were no thought of hell,
Save hell were taught ; that there should be
A Heaven for all's self-credible.
Not so the thing appears to me.
'Tis Heaven that lies beyond our sights,
And hell too possible that proves ;
For all can feel the God that smites,
But ah, how few the God that loves !

“ CHOSE VUE ”

A METRICAL CAPRICE

UP she rose, fair daughter—well she was graced,
As a cloud her going, stept from her chair,
As a summer-soft cloud in her going paced,
Down dropped her riband-band, and all her waving
hair
Shook like loosened music cadent to her waist ;—
Lapsing like music, wavery as water,
Slid to her waist.

MARRIAGE IN TWO MOODS

I

LOVE that's loved from day to day
Loves itself into decay :
He that eats one daily fruit
Shrivels hunger at the root.
Daily pleasure grows a task ;
Daily smiles become a mask.
Daily growth of unpruned strength
Expands to feebleness at length.
Daily increase thronging fast
Must devour itself at last.
Daily shining, even content
Would with itself grow discontent ;
And the sun's life witnesseth
Daily dying is not death.
So Love loved from day to day
Loves itself into decay.

II

Love to daily uses wed
Shall be sweetly perfected.
Life by repetition grows
Unto its appointed close :
Day to day fulfils one year—
Shall not Love by love wax dear ?

Miscellaneous Poems

All piles by repetition rise—
Shall not then Love's edifice ?
Shall not Love, too, learn his writ,
Like Wisdom, by repeating it ?
By the oft-repeated use
All perfections gain their thews ;
And so, with daily uses wed,
Love, too, shall be perfected.

MEMORAT MEMORIA

COME you living or dead to me, out of the silt of the Past,
With the sweet of the piteous first, and the shame
of the shameful last ?
Come with your dear and dreadful face through the passes of Sleep,
The terrible mask, and the face it masked—the face you did not keep ?
You are neither two nor one—I would you were one or two,
For your awful self is embalmed in the fragrant
self I knew :
And Above may ken, and Beneath may ken, what I mean by these words of whirl,
But by my sleep that sleepeth not,—O Shadow of a Girl !—

Poems of Francis Thompson

Naught here but I and my dreams shall know the secret of this thing :—
For ever the songs I sing are sad with the songs I never sing,
Sad are sung songs, but how more sad the songs we dare not sing !

Ah, the ill that we do in tenderness, and the hateful horror of love !
It has sent more souls to the unslaked Pit than it ever will draw above.
I damned you, girl, with my pity, who had better
by far been thwart,
And drove you hard on the track to hell, because I was gentle of heart.
I shall have no comfort now in scent, no ease in dew, for this ;
I shall be afraid of daffodils, and rose-buds are amiss ;
You have made a thing of innocence as shameful as a sin,
I shall never feel a girl's soft arms without horror
of the skin.
My child ! what was it that I sowed, that I so ill should reap ?
You have done this to me. And I, what I to you ?—
It lies with Sleep.

ENVOY

Go, songs, for ended is our brief, sweet play ;
Go, children of swift joy and tardy sorrow :
And some are sung, and that was yesterday,
And some unsung, and that may be to-morrow.

Go forth ; and if it be o'er stony way,
Old joy can lend what newer grief must borrow :
And it was sweet, and that was yesterday,
And sweet is sweet, though purchased with sorrow.

Go, songs, and come not back from your far way :
And if men ask you why ye smile and sorrow,
Tell them ye grieve, for your hearts know To-day,
Tell them ye smile, for your eyes know Tomorrow.
